This fourth game in the series changes things a little, because instead of the regular setting of a pizzeria where you have to work as a security guard and protect yourself from animatronics, you are actually a child who has to defend themselves from his stuffed toys that have come to life, and are dangerous since they want to kill you. You start in the child's room, with your toys, which are your only friends. He is warned by the dolls of an evil presence, and that's where you start, because you need to survive night after night, whether in the house, in the cafeteria, or in other places in the series where you go, and something is always chasing you. Instead of security cameras, to fend off enemies you will be using a flashlight that is unlimited in power. Use them to scare the monsters, but when that doesn't work, make sure you close the doors to prevent them from getting in. Interact with everything around you so you can find the clues you need to survive the nights and escape the terror!
