My script font

This image was lost some time after publication. Good free fonts are hard to find. Run a Google search and you'll find there's only more junk than it's probably worth time to stretch. To this end, Lifehacker reader Datali Friedman informed us of a large list of free fonts. So I decided to create the best official fonts without 20 licenses, which are likely to be used for official, serious presentations (such as business sites) than the colorful homepage of a teenager. This image was lost some time after publication, but you can still see it here. Website TypeNow offers a very cool selection of free themed fonts from your favorite movies, TV shows, musicians, video games and more. The choice of fonts is actually impressively large, offering over 300 fonts in all. These fonts can certainly be more convenient in case you've ever wanted to assemble a thematic party, website, newsletter, etc. TypeNow Thematic Fonts [TypeNow.net] This tutorial will show you a technique for developing your own expressive, playful, hand-drawn type. You will be guided by generating ideas and character design and will give you tips on how to manage space to create balance and harmony of your creations. I used to spend too many hours digging through font lists, desperately trying to find the right one, but nothing came across in place. Eventually, I realized it might be a good idea if I started reaching out to my pen and pad to design my own solutions, rather than anchoring myself on these nightmare lists of indecision. Getting to know the tent and outside the characters and trying to capture the mood you want to convey with typography is a handy set of skills. Yes, this requires practice, but every time you try, you will learn a whole bunch of new things. Black Friday deals: see all the best deals right now! For example, designing your own type really helps you appreciate how subtle differences can have a great overall effect and how the wrong type selection can really blunt your concept. This tutorial will help you start by creating your own fonts. Over the next three pages, I will share with you a technique and process that I have developed over the years. First, you will need to get your materials in order. Nothing special: just A3 tracking paper, pencil 2H, fine lining, good rubber, sharpener, ruler and a little tape masking. Let's start.1 Learning fonts Start by getting acquainted with the characters in fonts. Open a program like Adobe InDesign or Illustrator and type the alphabet into several favorites. Find out why you like them and what sequences and inconsistencies are obvious. The your sketch book and start experimenting freely with different fonts. Start by drawing some characters from the favorites list; Like As build confidence, start adding your own. There is no right or wrong at this stage, so just play.3 Sketch freeYou need to be confident enough to use a concept to help you connect all the sketching together. Here we create a basic typography for a fictional tattoo parlor called Pound for flesh. You can use the Loosesketreference file.jpg for inspiration.4 Two times you're pleased with a loose sketch, it's time to start a larger, more focused version. Take two free sheets of tracing paper and align them on top of each other. Use tape masking tape to smooth them, folding it over the top.5 Draw guides on the bottom sheet, start marking some guides so that you can place your characters exactly. Divide the page by its width and length to find the central point of the paper. From this point, draw the lines along the entire width of 4 cm increments, as shown here.6 Simple rules The first word has six characters that we will scatter evenly at the top. However, we need to establish several rules. For example, o and n should be wider than d, you and s. Aim for about 1cm for the width of the stems of u (noted in the image).7 Sketch symbolsThis step requires little experience and error. Start by sketching your characters, taking care to reflect the spacing along the entire width of the page and between each character, as well as their height. Do not try to be accurate: just feel for the drawing and distance.8 Enter sequenceTrack, make some small changes to some of the characters to enter consistency. Pay attention to o here, which now has vertical tension from the center. Study your characters, check each one to see where the sequence can be included.9 Draw oOnce are pleased with how your first word works, it's time to move on to the next one. In our example, this is about. I started by drawing the central part of my page, which fills a space that is about 2.5x2.5cm in size. Then I went off and equals both sides. Note that you will need to take into account spurs of o and serifs on r when doing this.10 Connect tapeTime to add some decoration. Place two stars evenly from f and r, and then begin to cope with the shape of the tape. Give for some breathable room and make sure that you are equally width and height through the four sections: the front, the shell and the edges.11 Flesh that outwardsHome let's move on to flesh. Measure the width of the pound by adding vertical guides aligned to the P stem and the end of the s to be used as the starting and end point. Then create a baseline by drawing a guide 1 cm above the lowest guide already in place.12 Balance is looking for flesh, trying to balance between each stationery. Most of these characters (each 5.5 cm wide) are made of the same parts. The stems are 1.5 cm wide, with a line set 5 mm to the left. I have marked more consistencies to consider.13 Describe the curveTaxo letter will be the hardest – the other characters are so right that it will stand out like an unshakable thumb, throwing out the balance of the word. Keep the curve of s at 1.5 cm in the center so that it matches the stems in the remaining symbols.14 Finesse itAfter you are happy, it is time to use the top sheet of paper tracking that you had previously attached to add finesse to your drawing. That must be the fun part. Remember that you can replace the paper if you need to start over, because you think you can do better.15 Ink upWhen you have finished the top sheet, it is time to use it as a template for inking a final version. Remove the bottom sheet from tracing paper and place a new sheet on top, gluing it with a patch. Start tracking your outlines with a pen.16 Add the contour effects ready, let's fill them out. Instead of claiming them black, you may want to try out some effects. I experimented with creating the illusion of light with a bump or making strokes that fade when passing into the light.17 Experiment Don't be afraid to experiment: you can easily replace the top, so you don't have to start again from scratch. I messed up the Flesh, made the lines too thick and created a dumb hit, so I started with a new sheet. When you're done, it's time to scan it in.18 Open FilesScan at high marks and open the files in Photoshop. If, like me, you only have an A4 scanner, stitch both parts together and select Image settings > > levels. Tweak the sliders so that black people darken and white becomes brighter, creating more contrast.19 MagicNow photoshop choose Select > Color Range. Click on the highlighted area and click OK. Then you need to create a new layer by keeping the pelvis selection around the object. Press Shift+Delete. Select a color you like and click &quot;Return". Now you have a free object that you can use as you wish. For more information about type terms and tips, see What is typography? and the best free fonts posts on our sister site Creative Bloq.
