You would like to prepare a joint PDF package containing several PDF documents. Here's a tip on how to improve the process: make the combined PDF easier to navigate by adding a table of content automatically generated based on the files you're combining. We will use the PDF Sejda merger tool! 1. Select files Drag all files to the web page. 2. Turn on the Content Generation Table Click more options and choose to create a table of content based on file names. In addition, you can also try using the names of documents. 3. Merge and download the result Click the Merge PDF files and then when the task completes click Download to save your combined file on your local computer. Online service or desktop app Currently offices are fully moved in the cloud and Chromebooks are becoming popular. Sejda PDF online services integrate with Google Drive and Dropbox so you can process files from cloud storage and save them when done. There are scenarios where you are not allowed to upload sensitive files to a third-party service. Files can't get out of the corporate network, and the desktop app that processes files locally is overworked. Sejda PDF offers a desktop app that has the same features as online services, but files are processed locally rather than in the cloud. Sejda Desktop can be downloaded and used with daily restrictions. Power users who reach these free limits are asked to upgrade. Form fields when combining PDF files Case of use: I have 20 completed forms with the same structure but different data sets. I would like to archive them by combining them all into one document. Most PDF merger programs will not handle the presence of multiple form fields with the same name in the same file. The Sejda PDF Combine tool handles this nicely by default, with no additional configuration needed. More you can even choose to smooth out the form fields, meaning the value will be displayed, but the field form will not be edited anymore. Even better if you're arching the form and want to keep your current filled values. Two-way print friendly When you merge a 3 page document with a 6 page document you get a combined PDF document that may not be beautifully printed bilaterally, since the first page of the second file will now be on the back of the page belonging to the first merged file. Sejda's Merge PDF has the ability to prevent this by adding a blank page if the document merged has an odd number of pages.
