Terraria is an action adventure sandbox game where you can set your own goals. You can search for treasure and raw materials, fight with bosses or build your own city. It's up to you. The result is a dynamic gaming experience for every player. Whether you play Terraria as a single-player, in an online player versus a player or in a co-op, your strength will depend on equipping yourself with stronger weapons, armor and accessories. As you move from one world to another, you will need to continue creating tools that you can use for this world. This is for a never-ending journey in the world of Terrarium. Terraria is a two-dimensional sandbox game with a three-dimensional pixel-like graphic style. It's a nod to 16-bit elves at classic Super NES games like Super Mario World, Donkey Kong Earth, and Legend of Zelda. The game begins in a procedurally generated world where you have a pickaxe, sword and axe. These are your three most important tools because they allow you to protect yourself and collect resources. These tools must be used to create a desk, furnace and anvil. Once you have all six items, you can start crafting your own few advanced items. They often require multiple crafting stations where the product of one recipe is then used as an ingredient for another. You can limit your goal to crafting items and building multiple homes and/or structures. Terrarium's most challenging goal is to fight enemies and their bosses. Terraria enemies appear as marbles, zombies, skeletons, demons, and other biome-dependent properties. They don't camp in a certain place, so having a sword, bow, weapon, or spell in your inventory is a must. This is especially important when you're in a battle for the boss. It will be challenging but rewarding as you stand to receive rare items and large bags of in-game currency. By meeting certain goals, you can attract non-playing characters such as a nurse, a businessman or a guide. NPC may stay in your accommodation in exchange for the purchase of their items.
