The Winx Club animated television series features characters designed by former comic artist Iginio Straffi. The show's narrative takes place in a magical dimension in which a group of fairy warriors defend their universe from villains. The group, called the Winx Club, attended and later graduated from Alfea College for Fairies. They are often supported by their romantic partner, known as a Specialist, who studied at the neighboring Red Fountain School. Specialists do not have magical abilities; they train to fight using laser weapons. The titular club is led by Bloom, a student from Earth who believes that he is an average human until he discovers the power of his fire-based fairy. The original group included Stella, the Sun fairy; natural fairies; Therein is a great music. and Tecna, the tech fairy. They share an apartment on the Alfea campus. The wave fairy, Aisyah, was introduced in the second season and became the sixth member of the group. The seventh member, Roxy, was introduced in season four and occasionally joined the other Winx Club fairies. Each season Winx Club introduces new villains against the main characters. A trio of witches called Trix are Winx Club's most frequent enemies. Winx Club characters have become popular with audiences. The critical response to the characters was largely positive, with praise for their positive relationships and presentation of gender roles. His character has appeared in various media, including spin-off series World of Winx, comic book series, and platform video games. In 2012, new episodes of the series combined cgi animation sequences that created characters in 3D.[1] A live-action series based on Winx Club, Fate: The Winx Saga, will debut in 2020 and feature many original characters. In the original series (seasons 1–4), the characters' mouths were animated to match the Italian voice actors,[2] who recorded their lines in Rome. The revived series, starting with an hour-long special, is produced in English first. Specials and seasons 5–6 were animated to match the Hollywood-based cast,[2] who recorded their lines at Atlas Oceanic studios. Season 7 also matched Nickelodeon and Rainbow's English scripts,[3] but due to budget cuts, Viacom moved the voice cast from Hollywood to New York City. Only actors from the original two casts are listed below. The creation and conception of Iginio Straffi developed the Winx Club character for the pilot episode magic bloom, which was completed in 2001. Character outfits are modeled on traditional European fairies,[4] while their appearance is loosely based on the popular celebrity of 2001. In a 2011 interview with IO Donna, Straffi stated Brinney Spears served as the basis for Bloom, Cameron Diaz for Stella, Jennifer Lopez for Flora, Pink for Tecna, and Lucy Liu for Moses. [5] Straffi wants fairies to represent women today[6] and look more modern than classic examples such as la Fata Turchina. [7] After holding a pilot screening, Straffi was unhappy with the audience's unenthusiastic reaction to the character's outdated clothing style. [8] He hired Italian fashion designers, including some from Dolce & amp; amp; Prada,[10] to give the character a more modern appearance. Flora underwent several changes because Straffi felt the test-geers didn't like the design. [11] She was initially drawn with glasses and a lighter skin tone; for the full series, removed[11] and she was given darker skin to look more Latin. [4] Winx Winx's fairy man Specialists, created in response to a request from RAI that this series should feature male prospects. [12] According to Iginio Straffi, the personalities of each Winx fairy are made as different as possible so that teenagers from around the world can identify themselves with the characters they think they like the most. [12] After the world premiere of the first season, the production team heard that American viewers noticed the absence of black characters in the show. [11] In response, Straffi designed a sixth fairy named Aisha, who had darker skin than the others.
