Equal-situation students at this school may be far behind other students in the country, and this school can have great accomplishment gaps. Parent tip ENVIRONMENT Empty since May, Broadmoor High School in Baton Rouge is set for a $15 million remodeling project soon, but it's likely to get pushed back at least a year as school officials struggle to figure out what to do with the 58-year-old facility. The delay would allow input from whoever replaced Warren Drake as head after he retires June 30 from his post leading the East Baton Rouge Parish public school system. Austin-based JG Consulting was recently hired to head up the search. The $15 million Broadmoor Middle is one of 22 named projects in a decadelong construction package called the Tax Plan and one of four scheduled to start during the 2019-20 school. On April 28, 2018, 22 drafts were approved by voters, renewing the education 1-cent sales tax. The original idea flowed when the tax plan was At the end of 2017, a popular foreign language school, BR FLAIM, had to be moved to the building's home in Broadmoor Middle when it was renovated. But some parents resisted the move, so the idea was dropped. BR FLAIM ended up moving from downtown Baton Rouge to the former Valley Park Junior High campus. They are happy when they are, Drake said. Several ideas have floated since then, but nothing has been solved. The East Baton Rouge County School Board is scheduled to vote Thursday or give Superintendent Warren Drake the power to dismiss the empl... Meanwhile, the school system was moving forward with the closure of a neighborhood high school in May and re-closing its 376 students to nearby high schools. On Oct. 28, the parish school board held a seminar to discuss the state of the tax plan, including what to do with the 14-acre property at the corner of Goodwood Boulevard and Sharp Road. The Council discussion left the issue undecided. Drake suggested consolidating the Central Office there, but found little support for this idea. For the past couple of years, Drake has been pressed to move the Central Office from 1050 South Foster Drive to a location that would be big enough to consolidate a dozen different administrative offices in one place. We can provide better services to the community, Drake said: We are in tanks. We are not economically efficient. ST. FRANCISVILLE – East Baton Rouge Parish School Board members attending a two-day retreat were presented with $21.3 million for a potential bud... The search for this place, including a brief insight into the mostly empty Cortana Shopping Centre, has so far been fruitless. We've looked at several buildings around Baton Rouge, he said. They just didn't have the right size. Broadmoor Middle is centrally located and, with some works, could also work as a central office, Drake said. Renovation costs could be more than offset by the sale of no longer necessary property now used in administrative sites, he said. But Drake's idea didn't grow up on the board members. I hate depriving potential students of teaching at the site and in the middle of the neighborhood and implementing this commercial building, said board member Jill Dyason.Board Chairman Mike Gaudet suggested that years of delay in continuing with repairs at Broadmoor Middle would be helpful in saying things can become clearer then about the use of the building that makes the most sense. Any delay should be approved by the Supervisory Committee, the special citizens' committee, which oversees expenditure arising from the 1 cent sales tax. Drake said he's fine, leaving this decision to the next superintendent. Broadmoor Middle is a good building, regardless of its age, he said, and could work as a variety of different types of schools. We had architects go through it. It has very good bones. It's solid, Drake It just needs to be restored from top to bottom. Instead, what to do remains an open question. Drake said that the school system currently doesn't need more high school places. Even with the closure of Broadmoor Middle, several high schools in the city have many extra places for more children. Also, the new Jefferson Terrace Academy, which will open in August, will have 300 more high school places. Jefferson Terrace Elementary is slated to be rebuilt on 20 acres of nearby vacant property, with construction scheduled to begin in February. Dyason, who went to Broadmoor Middle years ago, has n't given up on the idea of seeing her old school resume as a high school. She suggested that careful redraw of visiting areas could make it viable. Dyason has sought to free up space in Woodlawn Middle, the most crowded of public high schools in the city. Meanwhile, there's an elementary glut in most of Baton Rouge, including several charter schools that have opened in recent years. Just down Goodwood Boulevard from Broadmoor Middle are two public primary schools, Audubon and Broadmoor Elementary Schools, as well as one private school, St. Thomas More Catholic School.Mark Bellue, representing the Broadmoor area of the School Board and also attended Broadmoor Middle, said one option is to link any future work at Broadmoor Middle with a $25 million renovation at nearby Broadmoor High, which starts in 2027.In, Bellue was fined with delays. I hate us making that much money on a project when we don't have a clear vision of what we want it to be, he said. But, Bellue said, the delay should not be allowed to stretch too long. We can't have that property just sitting there, he said. Said.
