The American Institute of National Standards (ANSI) is a non-profit organization founded in 1918 that promotes standards and programs that evaluate compliance between global business and government standards. These standards replace federal information processing standards (FIPS), which were previously issued by the National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST), according to the U.S. Census Bureau. In addition, ANSI is the only U.S. representative to two international organizations: the International Organization for Standardization (ISO), of which ANSI is a founder, and as a member of the U.S. National Committee (USNC), the International Electrical Commission (IEC). Current ANSI standards, known as ANSI codes, are identified by a single coding system in the United States and abroad. According to Census.gov, there are five publications of ANSI codes. The international Committee on Information Technology Standards (INCITS) 38-2000x, formerly known as FIPS 5-2, lists codes for identification of the United States, the District of Columbia, Puerto Rico and the United States island areas. INCITS 31-200x, formerly known as FIPS 6-4, lists codes to identify counties and equivalent formations of the United States and island areas of the United States. INCITS 454-200x, formerly known as FIPS 8-6, lists codes to identify metropolitan and micropolitan statistical areas and adjacent areas of the United States and Puerto Rico. INCITS 400-200X, formerly known as FIPS 9-1, lists codes to identify U.S. congressional districts and INCITS 446-2008, which the U.S. Census Bureau uses to identify both legal and statistical organizations for counties, American Indians, Hawaii and Alaska. Based on StandardsPortal, the International Standards Classification (ICS) has a catalog of three levels of ANSI codes. Level 1 codes are presented in two digits covering the standardization of 40 areas, including agriculture, metallurgy and road engineering. 40 Level 1 fields are then divided into 392 groups to form Level 2 ANSI codes. Level 2 ANSI codes are listed as field number and triple digit separated by period mark. Only 144 of the 392 groups are additionally divided into 909 subgroups to form Level 3 codes. ANSI codes at level 3 are listed as field number, period mark, three-digit group number, other period mark and double-digit number of subgroups, such as 11.040.25. (The ANSI 11 code represents the area of health technology, the group .040 represents medical equipment and .25 represents syringes, needles and catheters.) ANSI codes or ICS codes range from 01, generalizations, terminology, standardization and documentation to 97, domestic and commercial equipment, entertainment and sports. ICS 31 Field. Level 2 group code for the ICS 31-180 field code, which represents circuits and boards - 31.180. ANSI publishes building publications that include standards for dealing with dangerous buildings, building preservation, housing codes, fire codes, safety codes and uniform mechanical codes. International Boiler and Pressure Ship Codes (BPVC) list standards for inspections, deterioration of design and materials, as well as components in the construction of nuclear power plants. Engineers and other technicians can purchase the 2010 BPVC Edition from ANSI. Do you get bombarded with spam calls on your cell phone? You're not alone. A new report by call blocker protection company Hiya says the number of spam calls in the first half of 2019 increased by 128% compared to the same period last year. Report: Spam calls change U.S. attitudes toward responses to Hiya's phones in the State of Call report, which analyzed the behavior of phone calls, the speed of the pickup call, the duration of the call and the like during the first half of the year shows that spam calls are changing the attitude of Americans to phone calls in general. Only 48 percent of Americans receive calls to their phones, meaning that more than half of all calls go unanswered, the report says. Among the key findings of the report are that, on average, a person receives 93 calls a month 46 of those calls from numbers not saved in the contacts of 16 of these calls spam calls Conclusions also shed light on which unsuccessful regions receive the most spam calls. The Dallas, Texas area came in first (last?), according to Hiya. The report says many spammers are deceiving their numbers to appear as if they originate from Southwest Airlines, which is headquartered in Dallas. When it came to transforming his last hotel, in the beautiful Hausmann building in Paris just a blow from the Champs Elysees, he wanted no one else. His son, Nicolas, once tracked down a Bond girl who became a otherwise known as Lady Weinberg, and convinced her to take up the project. And, as always, she doesn't Half. Her demanding attention to detail is evident everywhere: If you're alive, you should try to be the best, she says, in a riot of jade, emerald and forest green, black lacquered paint, chevron tiles and marble, and so many mirrors of your perspective shifts as you move. A small but cleverly constructed space, 46 rooms are located on six floors. Decor is the mishmash of Anoushka's travels. Moroccan in essence, compensated by Indian lanterns and ikat prints from Romania; capricious and sultry. Lady Weinberg is so obsessed with lighting that she added a Perspex filter to the light bulbs by the bed to achieve the perfect soft glow. In the basement, the iconic Parisian yoga club Le Tigre does soothing massages, while Galanya looks to Asia with yellow-tailed sashimi, shrimp ravioli, beef tataki and cod with Japanese mushrooms cooked with precision. Much like the whole hotel, nothing is accidental or left in case; it is an orchestra of taste, all under the direction of Lady Weinberg herself. It is a luxurious addition to the Parisian scene. - Sophie GoodwinInsider Tip: In stark contrast to the rest of the space, the three upper-floor suites are all white decked out in immaculate lingerie and muslin from Kerala, overlooking the Eiffel Tower. (If that is, chocolate-box twee is recognized as an architectural movement.) That's what makes the circuits side of the arrival of Le Coucou, a radically chic take on the chalet from Paris interior designer Pierre Yovanovitch three years into the creation, all the more remarkable. Khovanovitch's light and fastidious attention to detail is evident everywhere, from polka carpet (inspired by falling snow) to furniture with a playful sense of shape and place: icy cubic light shades, pole-shaped ski legs and boorel chairs with teddy bear earrests. While at first glance it looks gloriously grown-up, splashed loose 70s colors, look closer and there are plenty of tongue-in-cheek twists-off emoji-themed plates and displaying off-beat cuckoo watches at the Beef Bar restaurant to the periodic bird trail (title cuckoo as well as the scoop). Silky mashed potatoes (paired with cuts of rare steak) are a signature at beef bar restaurant, while in the evening only an Italian bistro, Bianca Neve serves a seductive risotto al tartufo. A third hotel from the young French band Maisons Parientes (the first two of which Provence hit Crillon le Brave and Saint-Tropez Lou Pine), and deftly teams up with natural beauty queen Tata Harper for the spa, leading to a tranquil indoor outdoor pool overlooking the mountains. Actively family-friendly, there Children's club on the therei plus the playroom for older teenagers. An energetic take on the ski lodge and definitely a cuckoo among the nest cookie cutter chalets in these parts. - Sophie ButlerInsider Tip: Book one of two beautiful self-contained, four-bedroom apartments, each with its own pool, mini spa, and boot opening room directly on the track.
