Learn to read notes and improve your reading skills with music tutor. Develop your speed and accuracy in reading notes by identifying notes in timing sessions. Choose practice between triple, bass and/or alt-key for 1, 5 or 10-minute sessions. Music Tutor helps with ear training and practicing your listening skills (hearing). During the practice session, each note is displayed along with the sound of the note (this function can also be turned off if it is not necessary). After each test, you can review your mistakes and see your progress. There is also the ability to set a range for practice, making this the perfect app for beginners and advanced students. The music teacher also supports Solfeg (Do, Re, Mi, Fa, Sol, La, Si or Ti) and German music titles. Music Tutor also comes with a music chart for treble, bass and viola clefs, which can be used to quickly understand the names of all the notes. Using Music Tutor, you can track your progress and improvements with the Stats page. It's been over a year since we saw what apps and games can help aspiring students learn to read vision. No aspiring musician will be able to move forward without getting the sight of reading a thing understood. That's why we thought it was a good time to get back to the subject and share with you the best apps and games to get up to your own music reading skills in 2018. You can check out our original list as well as some notes on what to look for in the sightseeing reading app here. Let's start with the holdovers there are two apps from our original list that deserve to be re-listed two years later. Why? Because they're amazing. Music Tutor Free (Sight Reading Improvement) is still free with an ad-free paid version (still $1.99). The 4.5-star rating in the latest version shows an amazing consistency with its 4.5-star rating based on all of his 5,000 ratings. It involves time exercises and games to really keep you on your toes. This allows you to view the test results so you can see exactly what you got right (and wrong) and measure your progress over time. It's available now on Android too, not just iOS. The Android version allows for a multiplayer format that lets you compare your scores against other and multiplayer sessions that really push you! Sight Reading Mastery provides exercises for sightseeing reading and games for a wide range of tools, as well as voices, as well as a wide range of classes. So, regardless of your tool or your experience, this piece of software can help you improve musical look. It also includes vision reading exercises based on actual compositions and audio playback of the correct notes, so you can improve all your musical senses. It also provides a live, personalized tutoring session from a music teacher if you buy his Musician level package for a month. Otherwise, you can still get a Student Package (without live tuition) for $19 per month. Both versions include a seven-day free trial. New options on the list here are some other great choices to wash our list for 2018: Music Crab (iOS version here) takes gamification to improve vision reading skills to a whole new level. With fun underwater graphics and notes masquerading as various sea creatures, it can make a good break from more diligent applications while providing some worthwhile exercises. As with most games, the better you do, the higher level you can access for more challenging exercises and tasks. If you need to see a young musician practice reading a view, this is the app that can do it. Note Teacher is focused on guitarists and seems to be only available on Android, so sorry for Apple users. With a solid 4.5-star base rating and sets between 100,000 - 500,000, it's worth checking out. It has more traditional graphic style notes. It also has multilingual support, and gives you the opportunity to practice using a basic musical nomenclature or a German musical nomenclature. The app is free, but has in-app purchase products that range from $0.99 to $8.49.
