Microsoft announced its plans to bring Cortana a virtual assistant for Android a few months ago, and a beta version of the app was slated to launch sometime this month. An early copy of the app is leaked to the internet today and you can download it through the Google Drive link below. Just keep in mind that since this file does not come directly from Microsoft or anyone associated with the company, you need to download and install at your own risk. If you're even familiar with Cortana on Windows 10 or Windows Phone, you'll be right at home here. Once you run the app for the first time and enter a few pieces of information, you can start using Cortana just like you would Google Now or Siri. Microsoft's voice assistant can help you plan events, update you on local news, weather, sports, and more. This version of the app seems to be fairly stable, but it's still a beta, so there will be many more improvements coming over the next few weeks. As for the app itself, Cortana's home screen is your feed, similar to what you'll see on Google Now. On the left side there is a slide menu with a notepad and reminders, as well as a settings menu. We'll go more in-depth with voice assistant later today, but for now, feel free to download THE APK and try it out for yourself! Download APK here (Google Drive) Tagged: Microsoft/Virtual Assistant Update, October 14, 2019 (10:09 am ET). After first showing up on the South Korean version of the Google Play Store (via Android Police), the Nvidia GeForce app is now available from APK Mirror for all to download (via XDA developers). While anyone can install the app on almost any Android device, you'll need a GeForce Now beta account to actually use the service. According to XDA, however, if you have that access to the service works very well. We don't know which devices will be supported or when they will see the release of GeForce Now, but it's a good sign that this APK works on most Android phones and tablets. Original article, August 19, 2019 (12:31 PM ET): The cloud battle has warmed up once again, with Nvidia announcing that Now will begin rolling out support for some Android devices later this year. Cloud gaming service service in beta for PC, Mac and Nvidia Shield TV for a few years, but now you can take the entire library of PC games with you on the go. Yes, you're reading it right. Unlike Google Stadia, GeForce Now lets you connect to a remote PC and install games you've already purchased on Steam, Uplay, Battle.net and other digital platforms. This makes it an attractive alternative for those who have extensive libraries and insufficient equipment. To make the service even more attractive, Nvidia announced that GeForce RTX servers are rolling out today in Germany, and very soon in Northern California. Additional servers will open in Japan and Korea later this year. This will bring incredible performance and advanced ray tracking technology to the cloud gaming service. Combined with low 5G network delays, Nvidia claims that this makes VR and AR possible on almost any device. Related: Google Stadia vs. GeForce Now: Which cloud gaming service is better? It is unclear which Android devices will be included in the beta version of GeForce Now. Only the flagship devices from Samsung and LG are mentioned in the release, but even then it is more than the original deployment of Google Stadia, which will be available only on Pixel devices. Many games won't support touchscreen controls, so you'll need a Bluetooth controller to play games on your Android device. GeForce Now already supports some of the most popular options, such as The SteelSeries Stratus Duo and Razer Raju Mobile, as well as the controller for Nvidia Shield TV. The beta version of GeForce Now will end in a few months, so be sure to sign up now if you want to try the service before it is released to the public.
