Cartoon baby elephant clip art

This week I was born my first painting my daughter, Sunny. 16 months without making anything. Paintings used to pop in my head and tap me on the shoulder until I put them on canvas, but since her arrival, my mind seems more focused on than there are any choking hazards in the area. I didn't mean to paint it, it was an accident. I was doing this strange no wine night with Kyle. We stressed about things and fall too easily in the booze-Netflix coma in the evening, and knew we had to wake up a little. (Are we alone in this? Oh! Get away from me, you Bota Box tyrant!) I was upstage in my closet. I saw my paint, and I saw a canvas I started more than a year ago, and I just went for it. It felt wonderful. So often our brains tell us that making art or doing that lace hustle thing you love is just an extra burden for our already horrific to-do list. Something we need to do - oh how fun, another way we fail! But really, creating can give us life. Energy like nothing else. If, we just have the space to do it. I learned to accept and even love that creating and dreaming happens in the small stolen moments between bigger crippled moments. After bedtime when you still smell slightly like baby pucks. For ten minutes in the morning before opening work email, and then another 20 while eating a turkey sandwich breaks on your lunch break. Whatever it is that put a ship in your walk, I hope you take the time. Not on a you should do more way, but in a you deserve it way. You deserve to take the stolen moments for something good. Yes, life is crazy and so, so busy, but also it is so, so volatile. What else are you going to do? See more Netflix? (note: sometimes it also gives life – keep it real.) Dream chase and create is worth it, and so are you. This post comes from the TODAY Parenting Team community, where all members are welcome to place and discuss parenting solutions. In this section, we will show you how to draw a cartoon baby in just five simple steps. You can sign it for free hand while watching your computer monitor or printing each page to look closer to each step. On each page we will show you an illustration of each step and then give you a description of how to draw it. Follow the red lines in each illustration to learn exactly what to draw in that step. The lines drawn in previous steps are shown in gray. Ready to get started? Grind your pencil, and let's sketch out the basic shapes on the next page. Contents Start with a circle for the header. Overlapping it with an oval for the cheeks and Under the oval, draw a slightly overlapping egg-shaped body. Body. the eyes are partial oval. Connect part of a small oval to a small U-shape for the nose. Form the mouth with a rolling line and a broad U-shape. Sketch the arms with bowed lines. For hand on your left, use a U-shape and a well-rounded V form. Use an oval for hand on your right. Show the feet with large, very rounded triangles. Attach them to the body with short bowed lines. Ad Sign U-shaped ears. Detail the eyes with small circles and U-shapes. Place a bowed line under each eye. Add short bowed lines to the points of the mouth. Define the chin and cheeks with longer bowed lines. For the fingers, use long U-shapes and bowed lines. To the body so the middle bulges out. Form the diaper using bowed lines. Use U-shapes and curves to show the toes. Pull the feet so that their curve is slightly. Place a curlicue in each ear. Form comma-shaped eyebrows and short eye axis. Attach two lines for the tongue. Shape the cheeks, collarbenes and a tear-shaped stomach button. In the diaper, draw two lines. Adds a line to each side of the waist. Shape the feet. Use a small oval, large oval, straight line, and bowed lines for the rattle. Criscross lines to show movement. Also darken the inside of the mouth and the stomach button. Make the eyes thicker. Use diagonal lines to partially darken the stripe on the ratio. Shade the ratio with very short lines. Ad Your cartoon baby looks great. Now let's move on to every baby's favorite friend - Fido! Photo: George Goodman (Reshot)If you're having trouble cutting your toddler's nails, you're not alone. This is an essential, frequent task, feared by many parents. We only so miserable failed to keep our baby daughter's sharp little claws under control that I arrived at her one-month investigation with clippers and begged the nurse and paediatrician to help me out; they refused. When our second child spent some time in the NICU, I was hopeful again that the super-observant staff would handle it, but alas, it was the one thing they didn't and wouldn't do it. For newborns and solid sleeping places, the problem is easily solved: Snip carefully away while your baby snoozes. But once the growth is more active and resistant, you can run into real trouble—especially than, like my fourteen-month-old son, your child's energy level to a non-stop, full-blown tornado. Out of sheer desperation, and after a decade of parenting, I finally discovered a trick to save us all from looking like something the cat just dragged in. To keep those nails beautiful and pruning, I found a no-fail nail-clip solution that takes just a few painless minutes. Tape your little tiger in a baby view, and snip away. Although children can still wave their arms and legs fairly freely, there is something about the full-body harness that makes any resistance not only useless, but super easy to manage. And in my experience using this trick, the child is distracted enough to look around that for once-they don't care what you do to their fingernails or toenails.
