I found myself in Duke hospital with my neck dislocated and broken due to a football injury that afternoon. I was a quarterback for duke university's freshman team, in hopes of one day playing football professionally. My young dream ended that day and my life took a different direction. My decision to become a Chiropractor For several years of recovery, my father encouraged me to see a friend of his who was a Chiropractor. I still had a lot of problems from my injury, so I left. I was very nervous about the first chiropractic treatment, but you know, it doesn't hurt. In fact I really feel good and everything gets really better. It worked so well, I decided to go to chiropractic school myself! After completing his education at Duke University, Dr. Smith was accepted to Palmer College of Chiropractic in Davenport, Iowa. During his four years at Palmer, courses included: biochemistry, primary emphasis on human anatomy and physiology, x-rays, diagnosis, chiropractic adjustment techniques, and patient care at Palmer College General Clinic. After graduating in 1977, Dr. Smith returned to Concord to establish his Cabarrus County chiropractic practice. We love difficult and chronic cases, smiles Dr Smith. I still remember the concerns I had when I went to the chiropractor after my injury so we made a point to explain everything first, answer questions and try to reassure those who might still have some concerns. Patients appreciate that. Dr Smith is also certified in Clinical Acupuncture. Dr Smith is married to Nancy and they have three daughters, Hannah, Alisa, and Katrina, Wayne's son-in-law David and Daniel, grandchildren Caleb, Wyatt, Kaylee, Kinley and Malia. Everyone in the family including grandchildren receives regular chiropractic care. I enjoy watching my children's careers continue to evolve. My main hobby, along with my wife Nancy, is to continue the process of building fond memories in the minds and hearts of our grandchildren. I also enjoy competing in trap and skeet shooting, spending time with friends me, and read good books from time to time. I consider myself a very good listener and hope I get a chance meet with you in person and discuss your specific health challenges.
