It was written by Irish author Michael Scott and was published in May 2007. Alchemyst has been translated into 20 languages and is 37 countries. [2] The film rights to these series were sold by Lorenzo di Bonaventura. The title character alchemyst refers to the historical nature of Nicholas Flamel, a French scrivener and manuscript salesman. Flamel has developed an afterlife reputation for being an alchemist and his search for philosopher stone and immortality. The alchemist is Nicholas Flamel. — Michael Scott[3] A summary of the plots sophie and Josh Newman are 15-year-old twins who work their summer jobs at the Coffee Cup in San Francisco (Sophie works in a Coffee Cup, Josh works in a bookstore on the other side of the street) when a mysterious man, John Dee, comes to a bookstore book book, Codex - or a book by Abraham. Josh witnesses both Nick and Perry using magic. He discovers that Nick is not an ordinary bookseller, but a medieval and legendary alchemist, Nicholas Flamel, is kept alive, making life an elixir (a secret from the Codex) for him and his wife, Perenelle. Dee also uses magic and takes the codex force while Josh is holding it – so two pages are forgotten; The final summons pages that Dee must cultivate the dark elders, the beings whom Dee serves, and who have kept him immortal for several hundred years. Both Flamels need codex to make life elixir, or they will age quickly and die within a month. Also, if they can't get codex, Dee will invite dark elders to destroy the world and return to an age where people are just slaves and food. Flamel quickly takes Sophie and Josh into hiding to attract the help of a scathach, powerful new generation of senior. There they are forced to run, threatened by rats sent by Dee, who is thwarted by Flamel and Scathach. Chased again almost immediately by tens of thousands of birds, Flamel then leads twins and Scathach to secure the aid of Hekate, a powerful three-faced elder who can awaken the twins' magical potential. Dee discovers this, and enlisted the help of Bastet and Morrigan. The trio mount a massive assault on Hekate shadowrealm, destroying Yggdrasil - the tree of the world - that is the heart of Hekate's power. While Yggdrasil is attacked, Hekate awakens Sophie's magic abilities, but doesn't have time to wake Josh up as the tree was set on fire by Dee. While she rushes to defend her home, Scathach, Flamel, and twins try to escape the shadowrealm. While escaping, they confronted Dee and witnessed the ancient ice elemental sword, excalibur power. They see Dee transform the entanglement into pure ice, then shatter the statue. Scathach notes that she thought excalibur was lost when Artorius died. The twins, Scathach, and Flamel escape the shadowrealm, just before hekate, Yggdrasil destruction, and full shadowrealm. As they escape, Dee uses Excalibur to freeze the tree, Hekate, whose life and power are connected to him, transforms into ice as well. As it happens, Dee is reported that Flamels and Scathach escaped with twins. In his anger, he breaks yggdrasil, who crushed Hekate in the dust, killing her. Flamel, Scathach, and twins travel to Scathach's grandmother, endor witch (also called Air Mistress), who teaches Sophie her magical secrets quickly by giving the girl all the witch's knowledge and power to know how to use air magic. While they are, Dee learned that the prophecy of the Codex speaks to Sophie and Josh. He tempts Josh to join him, using necrosis to lift thousands of corpses to attack the elders. Flame and Sophie, Josh almost agrees, but at the last moment, he realizes he will lose Sophie if he agrees. Dee brings all the dead to a nearby cemetery alive and they start attacking them, Josh hits Dee with his Hummer, distracting Dee long enough to escape with Scathach, Sophie and Nicholas Flamel using leygate (a teleportation device where two or more lines of energy, ley lines, cross each other) go to Paris, which is Nicholas Flamel's old home. The book ends when Dee surprises them. Special editions and includes variants in the United Kingdom on 5 August 2010, The Alchemyst was re-released with an alternative cover. [13] The purpose is to get money and guess the secret code consisting of a sequence of colored orbs by entering different sequences and using logic. When a sequence is entered, the indicators indicate when the player has the correct color, as well as when the color is in the correct or wrong position so that they can apply logic and guess the correct sequence. The film adaptation of the film rights book was originally sold by New Line Cinema and Mark Burnett Productions. [14] The film is currently pre-production. IMDb has been notified. According to The Hollywood Reporter, the writer hired to pen the script was Eric Bress, who wrote a scripted television show, Kyle XY. It has been reported that the manufacturer will be Mark Burnett and that he bought the rights to the book at auction before publication. November 2009 Michael Scott and Barry Krost will be executive producer. The script writer has yet to be published. Well, I promise news for the Flamel movie. Here's a press release. The film was set up with New Line, but New Line was absorbed by Warner and The Law came back to me. There was huge interest in the series and eventually, he went to Lorenzo di Bonaventura, who is the man responsible for bringing Harry Potter to Warner when he was there. He really loves this series. The next step now is to add a writer – I don't write, I have 3 more books to do! — Michael Scott[16] on 20 June 2012 it was announced that ampco films, an Australian company, had chosen a film. Michael Scott will write the screenplay. Production is due to begin in early 2013 and filming will take place in Australia and New Zealand.
