If I do it wrong, Outlier Air cannot be used simultaneously on 2 devices, although it can be paired with 2 devices, only that only 1 device can be used at a time. Can anyone confirm whether it can be used on 2 devices at the same time? It's such a disappointment as most Bluetooth 4.0 and higher headphones can be paired and used simultaneously on 2 devices. This is key for many who like to listen to music or shows on their tablets, laptops or other device, being able to hear notifications and receive/make calls to their phone, for example, my other thoughts after use for 6 hours are: 1. Sound quality is average - reasonable and about the same as Outlier One. This actually improves a bit after 6-hour use (perhaps due to some burns at the required time). 2. Those with smaller ears like ladies may find it less comfortable for sure. For a guy like me in the air conditioning room, that's fine so far. However, will be keen to take it for 10 km to work in a hot and humid outdoor environment to see how movement, vibration and sweat affect comfort levels, as well as the use of sensory control in pausing, skipping music or making/receiving phone calls on the go. 3. The battery is about 20% remaining after 6 hours (where it was fully charged before the 1st use). Not sure what 10-hour life injury can be achieved. 4. It shuts down on its own after about 5 minutes once it is not in use and Bluetooth is off on your device/phone. It's actually quite a while, hoping it should be about 2-3min. 08-03-2019, 06:40 AM #94 Excellence Member Join Date: November 2011 Messages: 7,051 Spyglass69 wrote: If I do it wrong, Outlier Air cannot be used simultaneously on 2 devices, although this may be paired with 2 devices, only that only 1 device can be used at that time. Didn't feel any significant pressure/pain points on the ear in about 2h use. 2) Yes, it blocks a good amount of noise 3) Tried to install it outside the showrooms, but the connection (between the phone and headphones, headphones to headphones) was terrible. The microphone didn't pick up my voice very well either. However, once I move to less crowded places in Suntec (main shopping area) and on the train home there were no drops of connection at all. The calls were fine, too. 4) You can easily insert or remove from the ear without problems - the tips go out along with the fine headphones. 5) I won't call it a bass-heavy IEM though. If your tracks have a lot of bass, then you get bass. There's clarity in the middle and highs, but could it be better? In my opinion, Outlier Air has a decent, competent sound that does not overwhelm. Serves its purpose as a truly wireless headphone. Bass and punchy enough to get your ears ticking. Soundproofing is normal, but for those who want to be completely insulated from the sound should turn on the volume to the maximum. And also, at the maximum volume Be too overwhelming enough to clear the amiable sound and still be friendly to the ears. The Sony WF1000x has trouble connecting to the right ear at the beginning. But it's solid after a few battery charges. The sound quality of the WF1000x is better than that of Apollo 7. It also has noise-cancelling n ambient sound. The current price is WF1000x $279 for the zoo10 and apollo 7 $329 at the Harvey Norman factory in The Viva Business Park. Just my two cents. So far the better one is the Apollo 7, the Earin M1 and the Sony WF1000X. Apollo 7 and Earin M1 support the Apt-X, but Sony has a very good sound scene and noise-cancelling. The current favorite is the Sony WF100X. However, if you are willing to wait. The upcoming Erin M2 will be fine. The current M1 has good sound quality, but the connection is wobbly to the right earpiece. The new Samsung Gear X icon is also not bad and has 5 hours of battery life plus a fitness tracker, heartbeat, build in 4GB of memory and ambient sound for $279? I didn't get a new x gear icon like the old one would give me earache when using them. So I'll pass it on. Think now the Best Value Truly Wireless Now is the new Gear Icon X. 09-11-2017, PM #10 Senior Member Join Date: December 2003 Messages: 670 received a complaint about Sony wf-1000x, wondering if you should take the risk? bakasora writes: I returned my WF-1000X after 5 days of use, due to 2 large large issues: -1 to 2 audible delays on everything that is done over the phone. -Intermittent sound cut in a few seconds to a minute. What's amazing about the WF-1000x is the first truly wireless earpiece with noise-cancelling. There is no doubt 0.5 sec video synchronization lag. But Apollo 7 and Erin M1 also have this lag. So far only Bragi Dash and Sol Republic airamp do not have this lag. So it's give and take on a really wireless earpiece. I was one of the victims who bought 2 fake kits and finally got the original on my third purchase. There are hundreds and thousands who bought it and yet they have no idea that they got faked, which is pretty sad. I went to carefully distinguish and compose them here, so that for those who bought will buy will be informed and hopefully do not get cheated. Now let's get to it. Warning, it's quite a long time. Note for all photos the left 2 are fakes while 1 real. For individual photos, the first two are fakes while the third is real. Sample photo order: Fake - Fake - Real or Fake Fake Real Part 1: Outer box Notice how the colors of the boxes are slightly different from each other. Especially blue and orange. The dotted picture is also different. A transparent plastic seal sticker is missing from one set while the size of the sticker differs between the two sets. The content inside is very different. The plastic that goes on is all different. For the two that are printed in Chinese, the words differ by the end. Additional headphones comes in different types of packaging. The guides are completely different from each other as well. At the back of the white boxes one on the left majority has a smaller cut. For the two who have Chinese words, the one on the left has fewer Chinese characters to end. At the bottom of the case, the left plastic packaging is not completely aligned. At the top of the case is engraved the Mi logo is different for the left and middle. Cutting for the ledge, where the case opens, is also different. At the bottom of the case, one left is too white and the print is tilted while one in the middle has several spelling errors (hard to capture and show in the photo). At the top of the case the lid cannot be fully extended to 90 degrees for one in the middle. Under the top of the case there is a rectangular marking from the production process. Left and middle has 90 degree angles while the right one has curved angles. Instead, it should be slightly weak. It shouldn't have spelling mistakes as well. 3) When you open the case, at the top of the case you will see this shape forming a rectangle on the underside of the top of the case. This rectangle should have curved angles, not angles at right angles. 4) The set should come with 2 guides (1 thin about 19 pages and 1 in thickness about 50 pages) for the Mi True Version Wireless Headphones and 1 Guide (thin about 19 pages) for the Redmi AirDots version. 5) The rubber tips of the ear provided should be a little gray rather than black Extra information: I managed to get only the original Xiaomi Redmi AirDots, but not the Mi True Wireless headphones (which is a global export version). The same methods mentioned can be used as well as determine if the set is original with some key differences. 1) Mi True Wireless headphones will obviously have a different box compared to the Redmi AirDots 2) Mi True Wireless headphones will have the Mi logo at the top of the case instead of the Redmi 3) Mi True Wireless headphones will have a different print at the bottom of the case compared to the Redmi AirDots. However, it doesn't have to be printed in bright white or there are any spelling errors 4) Mi True Wireless headphones comes with 2 guides instead of 1 that comes with Redmi AirDots. 1 guide is thin and 1 guide is thick (about 50 pages or more). The guide will be different as well with English, as opposed to Chinese only at Redmi AirDots to make sure you buy an original look at photo reviews online to see if they match what I mentioned.
