HOUSTON (October 11, 2011) - The Berks County Recorder of Deeds helps prevent fraud by providing FraudSleuth, powered by PropertyInfo Corporation (PIC), Stewart's company and a leading provider of end-to-end records management solutions for free property owners in Berks County. is an online tool for civil servants and office recorders, enabling property owners to protect themselves from possible fraud by searching for simple name-by-name documents that may have been stored against their name or property. With the increase in fraud, our office is excited to offer FraudSleuth as a tool to help protect our constituents, said Frederick Sheeler, Recorder of Deeds Berks County. Further improvements to FraudSleuth are expected to be available in early 2012 and will allow our property owners to take an even more proactive approach to protect themselves from fraud. The new improvements will allow residents to sign up with us to receive an automatic email message when the document is submitted on their behalf. I am very pleased that our computer systems provider PropertyInfo has made this valuable service available to Berks County residents free of charge to our taxpayers. FraudSleuth is a user-friendly tool for property owners with convenient access to official public documents. Property owners can access The Fraudsleuth online through their participating county recorder acts offices. Users can make simple searches to review all activity under their name, and if suspicious activity is found, they can contact the county to request further investigation. FraudSleuth is another positive step to promote awareness of fraud prevention, and it will give property owners to protect themselves, said Kyle Chaney, vice president of PropertyInfo's government services department. In addition to additional efforts in counties to prevent and defeat mortgage fraud, this tool is especially useful for property owners, who are usually victims of predators, such as snowbirds, the elderly and distant property owners. This is a safe and easy way to proactively protect yourself and your property. FraudSleuth is available to county governments nationwide with CountyFusion software, with additional improvements available in early 2012. For more information, call PropertyInfo at (877) 800-3132.
