Traffic Run is a free game developed by Geisha Tokyo and takes 61MB on your phone. The game was released in May 2019, and the latest version is 16.6, updated in July. To play the game you go through crazy traffic at different levels. You will have cars, bikes and buses everywhere, so watch out. As you move up the levels expect to find obstacles that are becoming more and more dangerous. It becomes more interesting as you move up the levels. Traffic Run is one of the easiest games to play that you will find in the game store. For one thing, there are no controls and you only need to use your finger to move around dodging traffic. In each level you come across different vehicles that try to smash you in. Cars also come at different speeds. You have to move fast and anticipate their moves. Initially, when you start the game it seems like a game you won't spend too much time on. But as you move up the levels, the game becomes interesting. Different vehicles are becoming more intimidating. There's also some obstacles imposed in later levels that make getting through the streets a little harder. Bonus levels Bonus levels make the game more interesting as they come with a timer. The challenge is to cross the streets and survive as many times as you can. The more times you do this on up the levels you go. Bonus levels seem to appear after every five levels. Well, it would be more fun if the bonus appeared more often than the ads. The game you will let your child play if you are a person with kids who love to play with the phone, then this is one of those games you don't mind, your kids are playing. This free game falls under the content rating 3. A bit of frustration And the game is fun, but has some disappointing areas. It's a free game, so that means it comes with ads. But, it's good that you can download it and play offline. This means you won't receive notifications about new messages from your instant messaging apps, but it's worth it when you take a break. There is no menu to make changes when you want and you will have to close it and restart to say switch to another skin. So far there is no way to pay to remove ads. Is there a better alternative? When we think of crazy road adventures, the first game that comes to mind is the legendary Crazy Taxi series. Crash Bandicoot is another classic that accelerates the adrenaline in dodging crazy traffic and making it safe. These games have been available for so long they will always be landmarks for those who want to enjoy. One of the why these games are interesting alternatives because they are easy to play and don't require any special skills. Games are also fun to play for everyone, regardless of age. The bottom line is that the decision on whether the two games will serve as a good alternative will depend on the player's preferences. Where you can run this is The game is compatible with phones running on the Android operating system. As long as you have Android 4.1 and up, you're good to go. You can also play on iOS devices. At the time of writing this review, collecting cubes is only available for mobile devices including smartphones and tablets. There is no available version for the desktop yet. Traffic Run is a simple game and easy to play the game. It doesn't involve a lot of problems, which makes it good to play like a relaxing game. Aside from the bonus level, there is no time limit to dash on the roads. So you can take your time at each level and not feel rushed as there are no losses in this game. Beautifully designed and it's a satisfying game, especially for people who love games with a touch of adrenaline. Should you download it? If you are looking for a game that you can play at your own pace, this is a good download. It's also a good option if you're not an expert player, or you're looking for something that doesn't require a lot of brain work. This is a solid version of entertainment, if you like simple games that are not complicated, the kind that you do not need a tutorial to learn how to play. Sometimes you hear about it word of mouth. But is it really so? Can you really make money? It is possible, but there are some caveats. First, banish any idea from your mind that you are going to make a fortune doing so. Secondly, it may not be as fun and interesting as it sounds on the surface - making money is rare. And third, you should be able to separate real opportunities from the many scammers out there. With these warnings in mind, let's look at some ways you can really make money by playing video games. Become a beta tester Every video game must undergo beta testing before it enters the common market. This can be an interesting and fun way to earn extra money. But keep in mind you probably won't work with popular video games. Instead, it will be the ones that haven't hit the market yet. Companies are looking to test their games with real users before bringing them to market. You may find some of the games you work with are not very interesting, or they can have serious glitches. But that's why companies are looking for people to check them out first. Your task will be to identify flaws or ways to improve the product before it enters the market. Plus becoming a beta tester is that you can make a lot of money doing it. The hard part is finding companies that will hire you. The best approach is to develop a strong social media presence, complete with a great following that could get you noticed by video game companies. If you do, they will come to you. Video game video game tournaments often develop communities and they can be quite active - and competitive. Competitiveness leads to tournaments, and this leads to prizes. It's not the same as getting a steady income, but if you have the strength of your spirit to participate in current tournaments, the prizes can be quite generous. One example is Call of Duty. Thousands of people are playing this game, but for some, it rises to become very competitive. That's where the potential win is. You participate in teams and meet online and either play together as a team or every person for yourself. Call of Duty has several different gameplay modes, including online multiplayer as well as zombies. Some of the new games allow multiplayer campaigns. Whether you work with the team or yourself, you can reach the playoffs move on to the championship. If you reach the finals, video game tournaments work very much like regular sporting events. Winning tournaments can lead to cash payments. Exactly how much you can do will depend on the interest in the tournament, and that's it one to the next. Take Optic Gaming (on YouTube) as another example. This is one of the most effective gaming teams available and they are known for winning several awards and having some of the best players in the industry. There are many prizes, including small prizes such as gift cards. But cash prizes can up to run as high as $10 million - if you can believe it. Become a video game reviewer If you have an interest in different video games, you can make money by becoming a video game reviewer. It's like blogging - in fact, you can even create a blog for that purpose. But you can also do it through YouTube, or on popular sales sites such as eBay and Amazon.com. The basic idea is to become a respected source of video game review. As you build up the following, people will come to rely on your opinions. You can make money by selling the video games you are considering on an affiliate basis (the manufacturer or distributor will pay you a percentage of every sale you make with your website or video). There is no guarantee how much money you will make. It depends on the popularity of your site or video because most of your income will come as advertising. If you are able to grow your audience into thousands, you can get video game company advertising directly. If it reaches this stage, you will have a steady flow of passive income. Agriculture Gold You won't make a fortune with this strategy, but if you enjoy playing video games and you play a lot, this may be a way to earn at least a little money while you have fun. Not all video games allow this to happen, but there are a few that do. Two of them are RuneScape and Counter Strike. The process works like this... You can create a character and align him or her (raise your skills). Some players will actually pay money for a high-level character that they don't have to align themselves with. In the case of RuneScape, the higher the levels, the more quests you can complete. The easiest way to do this is to farm the character. This means that you spend a lot of time aligning the character, whether it's for a particular skill or for in-game money. You can actually make a lot of money by doing this, since some characters can sell for more than $1,000. Others sell for as little as $100. It really depends on how many skills you have on alignment, and how motivated you are to play the game. Becoming a Twitch Streamer Twitch is a streaming platform subsidiary of Amazon where you can make money by supporting your subscribers. Most streams are related to video games, whether it's games like Fortnite or something that is played online like chess, but you make money through your subscribers. If you get your Count and have a lot of views, you can get sponsorship and giveaway opportunities as well. Some of the best Twitch streamers do this full-time and income opportunities are there. It's This. how much to earn Twitch streamers. You can also post these Twitch videos on YouTube as an additional source of income. Work in Customer Service If you're a veteran gamer, with experience playing dozens of different video games, you may be able to use these skills to help others - and earn some money while you do. Think of it as working on help for companies that provide video games. Sometimes you can find these positions, contact the producers or distributors of video games yourself. They may even have a job at home position. You can also try different technology support companies such as Sutherland Global Services. From time to time they have positions available on video game helpdesks. Other ways to get into the business it can be hard to find ways to make money by playing video games. You will not find vacancies advertised on job boards. But there are three common ways to get into making money by playing video games: Contact video game manufacturers and distributors directly, and offer your services. You have to be a well experienced video game player to even try it. Become a very competitive gamer so that you can take part in tournaments and other events that will make you serious money. Become a video game entrepreneur. That's really the business side of video games. You start a website, become active on social media, or develop a YouTube channel. You become a recognized expert in this field, attracting many thousands of followers. Then you can sell video games on an affiliate basis, or even get sponsorship from the companies themselves. YouTube is especially important. In fact, it is no exaggeration to say that your YouTube channel is your resume in the video game universe. So you can play video games for sure, but put on your entrepreneur's hat and be prepared to turn it into a side business - or something much bigger. GI!
