You know what? The AARP believes that I am fully entitled to their membership. Which, of course, is their thinly veiled way of saying I'm old, very, very old . . . And now it's official! And on top of that, if I give $16 to AARP, they will give me these benefits that are not available anywhere else: Gee, I am so overcome with emotion that I get tear stains all over my Hoveroundian . . . Because for $16, AARP gives me: AARP, The Magazine! Which is great and everything - but if they don't contain a loaded gun that needs to be held in my head to let me read it - AARP, Magazine! I'm no longer useful. Discounts that save you money! I'm sorry about the AARP, but I prefer discounts that don't save money. Call it crazy. Call it crazy. Call it maybe my pants are too tight. I don't know. I just feel like I'm grumpy because I'm so very, very old... Oops... I mean, I'm so, very, very legitimate. Strengthening Social Security, Protecting Medicare . . . including combating age discrimination for all! AARP, you call old people by their names perfectly worthy. Here's a little suggestion. Why don't you start fighting age discrimination by sning yourself in the eye! Access to health insurance . Access? What kind of access? Handicap access? Hoverround access? Maybe AARP means they give me the idea (for $16) to access the internet so I can find myself health insurance. And just in case all these AARP benefits don't make me want to reach my joint hand sock and pull $16, they throw this FREE GIFT (which only costs $16.!) AARP FRAME ORGANIZER! YOWZA, WHERE ARE YOU? As you can see, AARP knows that we geezer people don't want to trip over our car and head to the wrong side of the road without plenty of fluids, because we fully eligible sters often dry up causing us senile things like driving through plate glass windows and buying $16 worth of AN AARP. All I can say is Aaarrrrrppppp! Has anyone seen Pepto Bismal? For the first time... I love you, I have an AARP membership. I'm not a senior citizen. In fact, you don't have to be a senior citizen to join. And to be honest, I've only used it once on the Outback, where I think you'll get a 20% discount. The waiter looked confused, but whatever play. Anyway, my membership expired in October and I haven't renewed since There was a desire to go to the Outback. In any case, when your membership ends, AARP will send you renewal notifications. Renewal offers First, they will send you reminder emails. After a few months, they start to despair. The first offer that caught my eye was a weekend bag that was like a bag. However, I had to snaally mail the offer in, which was too much work. Then they sent me an offer, above which they call the day bag. I thought it would be a good bag to use on weekends, and since it was online, I pulled the trigger. Then when I was creating this email, I noticed that they offered a trunk organizer a few months ago. Now I could have gone three years 36 or 5 years for $49, but then I'd go out of a free bag every year for $15. Conclusion Similar to Sirius XM game and Comcast game, you should also play this annual replay with AARP. By the way, AAA doesn't have anything like this. Benefits + Social Programs +FREE Gift? Yes!
