Like many of you, I've done it all to my hair: bleach, paint, chemical straightening, curling, flat ironing, daily blow outs-works. Despite this, I managed to keep my hair shiny, soft, and bouncing over the years. How? Very careful protein treatment, pH adjustment treatments, and deep conditioners. [bctt tweet=This is one of my (absolute) favorite protein treatments! username=A_ModerntLady] In my experience you can control the strength of treatments it can be applied in several ways (Diluted spray bottle, mixed deep conditioner, during touch up) Less than $10 Easily accessible Light, unobtrusive smell that does not linger Works immediately Results were so nosable it surprised me. You may not have such a dramatic result-my hair was bleached, toned, and chemically straightened over time, but it is a valuable product for hair (outside the normal dyeing process was created). Shine, tenderness and bounce-all immediately improved. Please note: This is a very strong protein! I recommend adding 1 tablespoon per cup conditioner (always in the refrigerator unused, diluted portions). This way you can reduce the risk of major protein overload, and slowly increase the amount you use over time. It's basically like water. There is no slip or texture to it, so pouring it into your hand-straight-application is not the smartest thing to do. Buy it for your friendly, neighborhood Sally Beauty Supply or online. It's nothing, here. (Rare.)
