Fairfax Drive Arlington, VA 22201-4426 Phone: 703-993-8120 Fenwick Library, located centrally on the Fairfax campus, is George Mason University's main research library and holds the majority of the University Library's 1.5 million volumes. Fenwick is a research center, study space, digital technology, and a variety of resources for the Mason Community. The facility, renovated and expanded in 2016, is modern and bright, contains traditional and compact shelves, and is filled with modular furniture that can accommodate individual studies as well as group collaboration. In addition, the Fenwick Library has a state-of-the-art Special Collection Research Center (SCRC), a unit within the University Library assigned to acquire, document, preserve, and provide access to major collections and research documents. SCRC also manages the current non-current records and archives of George Mason University. Fenwick Lobby Spaces has a long hours study as well as Argo Tea Cafe. In the atrium, customers will find the Information Desk (an integrated full-service help desk, providing a single point of contact for research and collection inquiries), an express self-service checkout station, and a Fenwick Gallery space to showcase student and faculty art. The Research Commons, on the second floor, is a space designed to bring together many research activities in the Library in a collaborative and multi-disciplinary environment. The Research Commons covers a wide open area for group studies and collaborations, a Special Collection Research Centre and exhibition space, a Digital Scholarship Centre (DISC), a SP@RC, university dissertation and thesis services, a guidance room for the Writing Centre, and the offices of most specialist librarians of University Library subjects. In addition, the modern Main Reading Room, with seating for 75, provides space for events and lecture circuits. Group study spaces throughout Fenwick are equipped with white boards and monitors, and multiple MediaScape collaboration study spaces allow up to four students to share their laptop screens simultaneously. In addition, the two presentation practice rooms are designed to allow students space to practice and revise oral presentations. The fifth floor contains postgraduate study zones, including the Graduate Study Carrels and the Dissertations Writers' Room, a quiet space designed to give graduate students a place to pursue their research and writing. In addition, the faculty's collaborative space provides a place for mason faculty to work on projects. The Mercer Library provides access to all of Mason's print and electronic resources, specializing in Health Sciences, Biodefense, Bioinformatics, Criminology, Gaming, Security, and Computer Science. Mercer Library is located on the first floor of Colgan Hall on the Campus. Mercer Library offers direct consultation with library staff for scientific writing and research support. Appointments can be made here. Spaces Mercer Library has media viewing equipment, as well as assistive technology with scanners, reading software and designated CCTV. Terminals with internet access, Microsoft Office, and SPSS are available to affiliated customers. Mercer Library also hosts a standalone Scantron machine provided by the Collaborative Learning Hub. The Mercer Library has canon pay-for-print copiers/printers as well as an express printing station and Mason Money kiosk. Other printing services (color copy, color paper, transparency, binding, etc.) are available at the Print Service office, Bull Run Hall, Room 108. The Mercer Library also has a group study room available for booking.
