Getty/Katie Buckleyner This year took the words confused, stressful, and challenging to a whole new level, Amirit? What would you have plans in January of this year, they probably changed dramatically, went up in smoke, or left you thinking WTF next? Numerology can help. Listen to me, bb. Your name is the key to something called the true desire number of your heart. This number shows what really motivates you in life and the goals you naturally drawn to. This content is imported from an embedded name. You can find the same content in a different format, or you may be able to find more information on your website. Add vowels to your full birth name: A and I No. 1, E No. 5, U No. 6, O and 7. FYI, use your full name - first, middle and last. And use the last name you have at birth if you changed it after marriage. If this gives you a double digit, add the numbers together until you get one digit. It's your heart's desire number. For example, Beyonce, Gisele Knowles, Nos. 5, 7, 5, 5, 5, 5, 40, 4, 0... her favorite number, by the way. Did you find yours? Here's what it means: number 1 You are a natural boss and a great leader. Basically, you get. It's going to be. It's done. A 9-to-5 life is not for you and you will probably thrive as an entrepreneur or freelancer. You want to feel independent and able to follow your own ideas because you have a lot of them! Sometimes your natural fearlessness may seem arrogant, but you quickly recognize when you get your own way. (No one gets in your way, not even you!) Your true path is to lead, whether it's sharing an idea, launching a movement, or launching a brand. Number 2YY is incredibly intuitive, empathetic and creative. Your natural sentimentality and caring nature make you a wonderful partner and you place a great emphasis on your romantic relationship, if your relationship doesn't work, you don't feel! You are drawn professions associated with caring for others, such as medicine, social work or training. But in order to succeed, you have to work on your resilience and confidence because you tend to avoid conflict and doubt yourself. As you get stronger, you will find it becomes easier to get out of your comfort zone. Believe that you can cope with anything. Keep proving to yourself how strong you really are. Number 3YY is a creative genius! You have an innate desire to express yourself and you are full of ideas. There's never a dull moment in your mind (actually, it can get kinda tiring). You have to find a way to channel all this mental energy like writing, painting, podcasting, learning, learning... anything that will help you get all your ideas out of your head and into the world. But watch out: Sometimes your ego can get too big and negatively affect your relationship. When this happens, meditate, relax, and take a big breath. When you slow down, you can find balance and communicate clearly. You're at your best when you focus. Number 4Y is very ambitious, so you tend to choose a competitive career where you can climb the ladder. For you, money is a way to feel safe, and you use your hard-earned money to build a safe, comfortable, even luxurious lifestyle. You are also very motivated to create a happy, stable family and a strong partnership. You may struggle to find a work-life balance - you are not completely relaxed or spontaneous. Don't let life be all work and don't play-look career path that allows you to have fun while you pursue success. Number 5YY is naturally fun, charming, and forever young. Your life story often follows the late blooming path, which is cool because you are busy having fun and experimenting as you figure things out. People are just reaching out to you. Careers in politics, journalism, PR, promotion or advertising seem easy because you have the ability to know what to say and when to speak. Your biggest failures are excessive indulging and inconsistency. You may be tempted to choose a simple option or try an exciting and untested strategy rather than a proven tactic. You struggle to balance your sense of pleasure and sense of responsibility, but it gets easier as you get older. Number 6YS tend to put others first and you care tremendously about protecting the vulnerable. You are an instinctive healer and you are drawn to a career in medicine, law or therapy-work that allow you to use your talents and get results. You are compassionate, warm, humble and generous, and other people are drawn to your personality. You've got Lots of friends and confidants and fans! However, you tend to doubt yourself. Make sure you stand up for your own needs. Never settle for work, love or life. You deserve better! Number 7YS are driven by their intellect and search for truth. You seem to be on a higher plane than the rest of us, and your instincts lead you to a varied career, from a secret detective to a spiritual guru. You need a career that intellectually stimulates you and offers you the opportunity to seek and expose the truth. You prefer to work alone and you need time and space to recharge and reflect, especially because your mind often makes you the center of the crowd. Beware of falling too far down the rabbit hole of loneliness. You need to spend time with friends and family. They like it when you're around! Number 8Y is a strong, capable go-getter. Your natural leadership qualities give you the respect and admiration of others. You thrive on recognition and praise, and if you don't get what you deserve, you can become stubborn and negative. (But it rarely happens because you work so damn hard!) You'll love your career in leadership and management. You are a devoted and deeply loving partner, but you may find it difficult to express your feelings. You are usually guarded, so try to get your walls down. Try to see things from the point of view of others, and do not try to control everything. Sometimes even the hardest-working worker in the room needs a break! Number 9YY is a natural humanist and you see yourself as a citizen of the world with a deep and authentic social consciousness. You are drawn to roles that make the world a better place, like learning, entitle, writing and healing. Sometimes, you can be too dramatic and create noise where you don't need to, but when you find inner peace and satisfaction with what you do, these trends disappear. As long as you continue to follow your conscience, you will be fulfilled and prosperous. Content created by Assistant Secretary for Public Affairs (ASPA)Content last reviewed february 5, 2020 September issue marks my 12th as editor and I have been to sum up my first year. The main mission of this magazine is to serve you, the reader. I would therefore like to share with you this unofficial annual report, as well as a glimpse into the future. When I introduced myself in the October 2017 issue, I included my email address and asked you to send feedback and suggestions for articles. And you responded in droves. In the January issue, we added the authors' email addresses at the end of each article. In both cases, I would like to invite you to direct conversations with us. Your emails were supportive and polite (with a few problems, which is exactly what I would expect from loyal, attentive readers). You sent good ideas for articles, among them middle class families, forcing him to work in June and planning retirement as a single person in July. And you shared your personal travel finances. I like to hear what's on your mind. I used this column to share an understanding of our editorial philosophy, such as our promise to stay away from politics and keep our editorial content independent from advertisers. Basically, I shared my personal stories of finance. I think you have a right to know the guy who is ultimately responsible for what we print every month. Our farming team. The most challenging task of the past year was adapting to a smaller bench of writers and editors. Former editor Janet Bodnar resigned last July and then two senior editors. Kiplinger works as a Major League team that relies on its farm system- we educate and burden journalists and tend to promote from the ranks. We promoted Anne Smith to Investment Editor, Sandy Block to Senior Editor and Fane Wolfer to Editor. (We hired senior editor Eileen Ambrose from AARP.) We're still looking for another investing writer, but in the meantime we're filling in with top-notch freelancers. Because times are difficult for the publishing industry, we were replace the employees we have promoted. I am proud to announce that all of our writers, editors and designers (led by art director Stacey Harrison) have stepped up. As far as content is concerned, we are committed to delivering timely, actionable, accurate and unbiased stories. Next year we plan to help you prepare for the (ultimate) end of the bull market and navigate the bond market for income. We will also go through your 2018 tax return and prepare special reports on long-term insurance and id theft. (And I hope you enjoy our collection of quick and easy financial advice in this matter.) When I became an editor, I had no intention of tinkering with success. So instead of radical change, we tweaked the magazine around the edges. We have introduced the Millennial Money column and more Basics articles to expand our reach to younger and less knowledgeable readers; Janet began writing a new column living in Retirement; and we've added more diagrams and graphs to more articles. We are close to launching a podcast I mentioned a year ago; I'll keep you in post on this.
