These changes have been pushed out along with May/June security patches, and although we are at the end of July, many users have yet to receive improvements. In the United States, ATT and Verizon have already released a June security update that includes a new night mode feature as well as a Wi-Fi code scanner. If you bought the Galaxy S10/S10 from Sprint, you're in luck, as the operator is now rolling out the same update as the other two network operators have already released. Spotted by TizenHelp, the update weighs in at 510MB, so it would be better to download it over the Wi-Fi network. There's no mention of any new features in the changelog, but with this size, we can safely assume night mode and QR scanner code are included in the update along with the June security patch. Sprint Galaxy S10 owners should look for new version of firmware which should bring the camera and improve the security mentioned. SIGN UP FOR OUR NEWSLETTER!
