Declarative Sentences Interrogated Sentences Exclamation Sentences Imperative Sentences Declarative Sentences Declarative sentences declarative sentence is a statement. This may be an affirmative statement or a negative statement. The declarative proposal tells us something. I want to be a doctor. She's not interested in politics. He was here 10 minutes ago. She couldn't pass the test. A declarative offer always ends with a complete shutdown. The interrogator of the sentence asks a question. Can you help me? Where are you going? Who planted the cat? Why were you yelling at me? The interrogator's sentence always ends with a question mark (?). Exclamation points show strong feelings, emotions, or excitement. Bravo! We won! Alas! She's gone! Exclamation points always end with an exclamation point (!) imperative offer We use imperative suggestions to give orders or commands or make enquiries. Imperative sentences usually do not have a pronounced theme. Come here. (Here is a topic you understand but are not mentioned.) Put it down there. Exit. Please be quiet. Imperative offers usually end in a complete shutdown. Exercise Read the following suggestions and determine their appearance. 1. I have two pet dogs. 2. Have you finished the report? 3. Where Have You Been All This 4. Since yesterday, the rain has not stopped. 5. She leaned out of the window. 6. Listen to me. 7. Don't make any noise. 8. 8. I cut my chin! 9. We must not tolerate injustice. 10. Open the box. Answers 1. I have two pet dogs. (Declarative) 2. Have you finished the report? (Interrogator) 3. Where have you been all this time? (Interrogator) 4. Since yesterday, the rain has not stopped. (Declarative) 5. She leaned out of the window. (Declarative) 6. Listen to me. No, no, no. 7. Don't make any noise. No, no, no. 8. Oh! I cut my chin! There are two things to consider when considering the types of sentences: the function and structure of the proposal. When we consider the offer function, we are primarily concerned that punctuation ends with a sentence. When we consider the structure of a proposal, we are interested in how many provisions are in the proposal. This page will look at both of these concepts to help the reader improve their understanding of the types of sentences. The sentence functions each sentence serves as one of four functions. He must either make a statement, issue a command, ask a question, or exclaim and have emotions or ideas. Because of this, we can understand the type of sentence by analyzing the function that the sentence performs. Declarative sentences declarative sentences make statements. Most of the proposals are declarative. Declarative offers always end in a period. Examples that I love pizza. It's simple. In each of those proposals, he made a statement; hence, they are declarative proposals. Imperative offers are issued by teams. In most cases, imperative offers have no visible subject; rather, the subject is implied. Most imperative proposals end in a period, but they can also end with an exclamation point. Examples Stay where you are. When scanning the structure, we must first find or a predicate that remains in the aforementioned sentence. Then, to find the subject, we ask ourselves: Who should stay? The answer is that you have to stay. While you're never clearly stated in the sentence, it's this hence, in imperative sentences, the subject is often implied by you. Don't do this. Again, we may ask ourselves: Who or what should not do this? The answer, of course, you again, as the subject of an imperative sentence is usually implied to you. The sentences questioned are questionable. Because of this, all the sentences being questioned end in question. Examples you want to study? Where are you going? In each case, the rapporteurs request information. Because of this, both proposals end the question marks. Exclamation verdicts exclamation points express excitement or emotion. Writers express an exclamation point when they finish their sentences with exclamation points. Each exclamation point should end with an exclamation point. Use exclamation points sparingly as too much excitement can annoy the reader or listener. Examples It was amazing! I'm sick of it! Note in each case that the sentence expresses emotions. An exclamation point is a signal to readers that the speaker shouts or exclaims.
