But in Saturday's game between Marquette and Providence, it wasn't players, coaches or even fans going wild. The Big Eastern Conference game was halted during the second half when the bat flew into bradley center field on Saturday in Milwaukee.Even crazier, the bat chased Providence player Bryce Cotton, the leading scorer in the Big East, while he dribbled onto the field. According to the Milwaukee Journal-Sentinel, the players tried to avoid the bat and officials fled from it while flying. Mocksession captures GIFs of Providence player Sidiki Johnson performing Matrix moves to avoid bats. It was fantastic:Marquette led 59-51 with 8:52 remaining when play was halted. Players and coaches apparently went berserk while throwing towels trying to tame the bat. The Golden Eagles Journal-Sentinel blog noted the incident:They tried to catch him with a towel. Good luck there. It's getting funnier. Players and coaches from both teams threw towels at the bat. Their shooting percentage there is not so good. Providence coach Ed Cooley had a towel on his head. So is the TV announcer. The game has been and the lights have been turned off inside Bradley Bradley with 736 left. They're serious about catching these bats. It turned into a carnival with the lights off. Fans waved their phones in the dark as if they were at the concert. They played whitney houston songs. Not sure if it will get rid of him. This. I've heard about bats coming out of... Well, you know. Photographers capture bats in the field in these photographs: photos:
