They are superhuman possessors of destructive forces, and their resurrection is possible only through the specific rituals described in the Book. Even the Arabic word for the ancients comes from the fall of the Jewish verb. So they will be Fallen Angels. Author Of Necronomicon, Abdul Alhazred, born in Sanna, Yemen. In search of wisdom, he wandered from Alexandria to Punjab, spending many years in the depopulated desert of southern Arabia. Alhazred has mastered several languages and was an excellent translator. He also possessed the skills of a poet, which provided a dispersal aspect in his works, including Necronomicon. Abdul Alhazred was familiar with the philosophy of the Greek triclo, as well as mathematics, astronomy, metaphysics and the culture of pre-Christian peoples such as the Egyptians and gods. There is a great similarity between the characters and plots of the Necronomicon narrative in different cultures. The Scandinavian myth of the apocalypse, called Ragnarok, is proposed in some passages of the Book; In addition to Arabic genies and Jewish tradition of Nephilins. A Latin translation of Necronomicon was made in 1487 by the German priest Olay Wormius, who was secretary to Miguel Thomas Torguemada, the chief inquisitor of Spain. It is likely that Vormius received the manuscript during the Moors' chase. The necronomicon must have taken away with Vormius to get him to risk moving him to such a dangerous time and place. A copy of the book was sent to Abbot John Tritenius, accompanied by a letter containing a blasphemous version of some of Genesis. For the courage of Vormius accused him and burned along with copies of his translation. However, it is assumed that the copy would have survived the Inquisition, preserved and preserved in the Vatican. The historic passage of the Necronomicon continues in 1586, when the magician and scientist John Dee announces his intention to translate it into English, based on the Latin version of Wormius. However, Dee's work was never printed, but arrived hands of Elijah Ashmole (1617-1692), the scientist who rewrote them for the Bodleian Library in Oxford. Thus, the works of Ashmole were forgotten for about 250 years, when the British magician Alistair Crowley (1875-1947), the founder of Thelema, found them in Bodleian. Thethelema is governed by the Book of Law, the work is divided into three chapters in which the plagiarism work of John Dee is obvious. In 1918, Crowley met fashion designer Sonia Green and spent several months in his company. Sonia met the writer Howard Phillip Lovecraft in 1921 and married in 1924. During this period the author releases the novel The Unnamed City and the story of the Dog, where he mentions Abdul Alhazred and Necronomicon. In 1926, an excerpt from C'Thull's book The Call mentions parts of the Book of The Crawley Law. Thus, the modern rebirth of the necronomicone is associated with Lovecraft, although there is no evidence that the writer had access to the Book of Dead Names.
