Ashley C. Richardson (born June 27, 1965[citation needed]), sometimes credited as Ashley Montana, is an American former model. She has appeared on the cover of Elle a total of seven times and on the cover of Cosmopolitan twice. She has also appeared six times in the Sports Illustrated Swimsuit Issue (1989, 1990, 1991, 1992, 1993 and 1995). After appearing on the cover of the Sports Illustrated Swimsuit Issue in 1991, she was mistakenly reported as the wife of then SAN Francisco 49ers quarterback Joe Montana, however she was married to New York nightclub owner Paul Montana. Their marriage ended in annulment in 1993, when Richardson returned to use her maiden name. Richardson later had a brief relationship with model Brian Buzzini, resulting in a child, Daisy. After giving birth, she lost all the weight of her pregnancy[1] and subsequently appeared in the 1995 Sports Illustrated Swimsuit Edition. Richardson also had a brief relationship with John F. Kennedy Jr.. [3]
Among Richardson's commercial publicity appearances, she often modeled for L'eggs Sheer Energy pantyhose in print in television commercials. In 1989, she appeared in John Mellencamp's let it all hang out music video (the song appears on Mellencamp's big daddy album). During the height of her career, she visited U.S. military installations in a morale-boosting effort to support U.S. troops, including the San Diego Naval Submarine Base in 1991, when she visited the USS Haddock.

All this was removed today by another editor, and I do not know if this was appropriate. It seems like a lot of verifiable information to be removed in a no-discussion scan.

Removed again as no source - wouldn't it be obvious that the center of each magazine is a reliable source? The removal seems demotivated - I'm restoring it this time.
SergeWoodzing (talk) 17:41, December 4, 2011 (UTC)
If you want to split this into a list article I wouldn't be oearly owe, but it's not really remarkable enough for such a large list in the main article.
Nikkimaria (talk) 23:33, December 4, 2011 (UTC)
I do not understand how it is not remarkable here, but it would be remarkable in a list article. I don't intend to make any changes either. I usually appreciate when someone has done so much work to provide source information. This tends to inspire others to do so.
SergeWoodzing (talk) 1:18, December 5, 2011 (UTC)
I don't mean notability as in WP:N, but more in terms of WP:SUMMARY.
Nikkimaria (talk) 04:29, December 5, 2011 (UTC)
These types of lists seem common. List of Pets of the Month. But I'd need sources, of course.
Will Beback talk 5:11, December 5, 2011 (UTC)
It seems to me that the magazine itself is the source, reliable, published as it always was.
SergeWoodzing (lecture) 11:35, December 5, 2011 (UTC)
I suppose that's the case, although this publication may be difficult to verify due to the relative shortage of libraries that carry it. [1]
The biggest concern with a list like this is that teenage vandals will add the names of their classmates.
Wikipedia:Friends of gays should not be allowed to edit articles.
Will beback speak 16:54, December 5, 2011 (UTC)
Vandalism is vandalism no matter where. Semi-protect?
SergeWoodzing (talk) 18:03, December 5, 2011 (UTC)
Vandalism is a little more common with articles like this. If it is virtually impossible to check the list, then it is more difficult to detect and fix the vandalism. Have any active editors here actually checked the existing names in the list?
Long-term semiprotection is undesirable, but if it were a standalone list, the protection would not affect the rest of the article.
Will Beback talk 5 December 2011 (UTC)
Another concern with this list is to make sure it is linked go to the models and not to other people's biographies. For example, Bob Prince was born in 1916, so I doubt he was a model in 1975. Glenn Brown was born in 1966, but is he the person who showed up? Unless we learn more, it's impossible to say.
Will Beback talk 19:55, 5 December 2011 (UTC)
Ok, I removed it again. If someone wants to create the unattended list article and check the links, they should feel free to do so.
Nikkimaria (talk) 20:15, 5 December 2011 (UTC)
Whoops! Where did you find consensus to do that? I don't see that. But I'm not going to rein in it again, because that's not important enough for me to edit the war. It seems to be of great importance to you to remove this list, and I doubt you will provide this extra article. I regret having to say, with all due respect, that I must find your actions here irrational and arbitrary and not in wp's best interest, starting with your removal of all this in the first place without a word on this conversation page. In principle, I don't think such behavior is appropriate.
SergeWoodzing (talk) 22:27, 5 December 2011 (UTC)
In fact, WP:BOLD supports my first actions here. Obviously I disagree that I behaved irrationally, but like you. The list was problematic, as agreed by two editors here; if you feel otherwise, then by all means create the article for it.

Celebrity Nudes
There was a list of celebrities who posed nude/half-naked for the which was excluded on 11 April 2014. This list was useful for something I'm writing and I just went back to recheck a name and found that the entire section has been reduced to a single row on the monthly screen cover of the magazine (and a single line completely denies the need for an entire section) - I state that the list should be reinstated. Many celebrities graced the cover, were interviewed and appeared in movie screenshots, but very few of them actually posed for pictagens.
VinnieRattolle (lecture) 14:35, April 20, 2014 (UTC)
Hello, User:VinnieRattolle. Although I'm not the person who removed the list, I noticed the removal and actually support it due to its inconsistencies with some of our core policies. Our policy on biographical material about living people requires high-quality sources when discussing them. Unfortunately, there was not a single source to prove the inclusion of any individual on this list. --Moonriddengirl (talk) 15:13, 20 April 2014 (UTC)
