The original story (published January 14, 2020) follows: We should see glimpses of Android 11 soon from the Mountain View giant. On the other hand, a number of devices have been upgraded to Android 10 from September 2019. These include devices from the likes of OnePlus, Xiaomi, Nokia and even Motorola. Many other phone manufacturers are expected to make this update available for more devices during the first quarter of this year. These include devices from Huawei, Samsung, OPPO and Realme - just mention, but some. Realme 3 Pro is scheduled to get an update this month some phones, however, are not so clearly cut in terms of whether or not they will get Android 10. One such device is the Huawei P20 Lite. This device was launched back in March 2018 with Android 8.0, but was later updated to Android Pie based on EMUI 9.0. It was previously reported that the Huawei P20 Lite will receive an Android 10-based EMUI 10 update. However, subsequent reports have shown that the right device for Android 10 is under consideration. Little has been said about the timing of the OTA. The Huawei P20 Lite Company (via its Indian Twitter handle) has just dealt a blow to all Huawei P20 Lite users around the world who have been waiting for an Android 10 update. According to them, the phone does not meet the minimum requirements for equipment for Android 10. No Android 10 for Huawei P20 Lite (Source) With this, all is lost in terms of hope for Android 10 for this device. This comes at a time when the other siblings of the phone, the Huawei P20 and P20 Pro, have been confirmed to get an EMUI 10 update soon. Another device whose fate sealed as far as Android 10-based EMUI 10 is concerned is Honor 9 Lite. The device was first launched in late 2017 and sold as Honor 9 Youth Edition in some regions. Honor 9 Lite Initial reports showed that the device is still still However, Honor 9 Lite Future is also revealed by Honor India's Twitter handle. No Android 10 for Honor 9 Lite (Source) How Huawei P20 Lite and Honor 9 Lite are powered by Huawei's own HiSilicon Kirin 659 chipset. This new development may hint at a problem with the chip, making it difficult to run Android 10 effectively. As things stand, these two devices may have to agree to an Android 9-based security patch update and maintenance for the rest of the device's life. Update (March 6) Thousands of users have signed petitions, but it remains unclear whether Huawei will change its mind. Read more about it here. The Huawei P20 Lite supplied the pre-installed EMUI 8.0 out of the box and is currently running emUI 9.1, users of this device have been waiting for emUI 10 (Android 10), but Huawei denies giving it the latest version of the OS. Now Huawei P20 Lite users are getting a new software update that brings some new smart features including Smart Charge Battery Manager, Huawei Assistant, and the latest security update. These features improve your phone's performance and overall user experience. Changelog: Battery: Adds Smart Charge mode, reducing battery aging, adapting to normal charging with AI training and preventing a continuous charging battery when fully charged. (This feature is enabled by default.) Adds the Smart Battery Capacity feature, reducing battery aging by intelligently adjusting battery capacity depending on battery condition. Go to the settings for the battery's more battery settings and allow Smart Battery Capacity to try it out. Huawei Assistant Today: Adds Huawei Assistant to your home screen providing smart reminders, personalized news, and other content relevant to you. Security: Integrates Android security patches released in July 2020 to improve system security. Software version: The July 2020 update for the Huawei P20 Lite comes with the EMUI 9.1 version of 9.1.0.355 and the size of the 721MB software package. Note: The EMUI version and size may vary. Deployment will expand gradually and may take some time/days to reach your device. Want to send us tips, updates screenshots, or a message?
