K. Promes, K. Kinsey Promes: Mariage d'amourPess of Richard Kleiderman from the album Lettre and Ma M'rePublished1979 (1979)Released1979Length2:1 Richard Kleiderman's version 4:23 George Davidson's Version Composer (s) Paul de Senneville Mariage d'amour (English: Marriage of Love) is a work of French solo piano music, written by Paul de Senneville in 1979 and first performed by pianist Richard Kleiderman from his album Lettre and Ma M're in 1979. Later, the pianist George Davidson performed this piece of music from his album My Heart Will Go On with a slightly different version. This version is sometimes mistakenly attributed to Frederick Chopin as Spring Waltz due to a YouTube upload with the wrong name, which reached more than 34 million views before being deleted. By March 2019, several new copies with such a erroneous name were available on YouTube, and one of them reached more than 100 million views. The composition of the play was written in the key G minor. With a tempo of about 72 bpm, the signature time changes several times, starting with 4/4, then moving on to 5/4 and 3/4, and then back to 4/4. It has a chord progression of the Gm-Cm-F-B $\flat$ -D.
