Christian music has grown rapidly over the past century to represent the changing style of music we enjoy. Contemporary music offers the latest musical style with the same traditional Christian message in lyrics. In fact, Contemporary Christian music is growing rapidly in popularity, and so is the number of sub-genres offered to those interested in listening. It's also because of a new generation of hipster-cool worshippers, and free radicals in spirit, so even music has changed little to keep pace with listeners, and to appeal to them. And although music is an important part, most composers want listeners to focus on the lyrics and really immerse in the story. Here, there are some newer genres in Christian music. Contemporary Music literally covers all new era Christian music genres, but is most often associated with a new movement of Christian music that has alternative rock, pop, and country sounds. The contemporary movement began in the 1960s, with this type of music later referred to as the music of Jesus. Some Christians dispute whether contemporary tone matches their religion or not, but contemporary is a popular genre that gives Protestant listeners a faith-based alternative style of music. The growth of contemporary style has been strong since the mid-1990s, and newer artists and sub-genres are helping continue the expansion of Christian music. Hip Hop Christian hip hop, or gospel rap, is a unique genre of Christian music. Due to the often sinful nature of mainstream rap lyrics, it has become a difficult path for Christian rap artists to gain popularity. However, since the 1990s Christian rap has become popular among younger generations looking for an exhilarating form of music that reflects their urban lifestyle. The most popular innovator among Christian hip hop artists is likely DC Talk, which took the music stage by storm in the late 1980s before switching to more pop sound in the mid-1990s. Christian hip hop is a wonderful way for Christians to spread their faith to children from the streets and other youth looking for fresh music genres. Gospel If gospel music doesn't fill the only one with spirit, then I'm not sure what it can be! Gospel music is exhilarating, inspiring, and fun to listen to. When most think of Gospels, churches in the south are at best. In fact, gospel music has been considered to have during the period of slavery in the late 1800s. The gospel genre became more defined and gained popularity in the first quarter of the twentieth century, and is now being listened to around the world. Gospel music is known for its strong vocals surrounded by electric guitar, bass, and drums. Gospel music flourishes today and is certainly considered a staple of Christian music. Christian Rock Christian rock music covers a lot of land with many different subgenre contained in the rock category. The explosion of sex, drugs, and rock 'n roll in the 1960s certainly made many Christians wary of jumping into the rock scene, but in the early 1970s Christian rock bands began to separate themselves from the image of the devil, and instead produced Christian lyrics with rock tones. Today many bands are considered Christian rock artists, some more devoted to Christian titles than others. While some may not be aware of this, the band U2 was the catalyst for Christian rock in the 1990s based on their ↓ great success beginning in the 1980s. Big Business Even if you consider the business aspect of Christian Music, it is actually quite large, given its popularity & its appeal with younger crowds. It's no wonder that the band Hillsong United came third on the ARIA charts some time ago, and the band has enjoyed success in the US and abroad over the years - selling stadiums at venues including the US.
