When originally leased in 1664, it covered a much larger area. Part was sold to create New Jersey in 1664, and title requests were ceded in 1682 to Delaware and Pennsylvania. In 1780, New York ceded the area to the United States as part of the Northwest Territory in 1787. New York ratified the Constitution of the United States on July 26, 1788; it was the 11th of the original 13 states to join the Union. In 1791, New York agreed to the separation of the state of Vermont; in 1792, it sold the area along Lake Erie (Erie Triangle) to Pennsylvania, to the general assumption that the boundaries were similar to the current state. The population survey data for New York is available starting with the 1790s population survey. The 1790 population survey data does not include the population included in present-day Pennsylvania or Vermont. These areas are listed as part of those states, although the Erie Triangle and all of Vermont were legally part of New York at the time of the population survey. The United States acquired a small area, including the southwestern corner of New Mexico, from Mexico in 1853 as part of Gadsden Purchase. The territory of New Mexico was held from the acquired area on December 13, 1850, and includes most of present-day Arizona and New Mexico as well as parts of Colorado and Nevada. The territory was reduced with the organization of the Colorado Territory in 1861 and the Arizona Territory in 1863 to the general assumption that the boundaries were similar to the current state. The population survey data available for New Mexico began with the 1850s population survey. The 1850s population survey was for the entire Territory of New Mexico, including areas not in present-day New Mexico. For an explanation of New Mexico's 1860 population revision, see Richard L. Forstall, U.S. Population: 1790-1990, Washington, DC: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1996, p. 110. Data for the legally established state of New Mexico began with the 1920s population survey.
