As a private lawyer, she conducted cases in state courts. [2] W The legal basis of the moral constitution, a book arguing that the United States Constitution can only be interpreted according to the Bible. In November 2020, Trump announced that Ellis is a member of a legal team that is leading efforts to overturn President-elect Joe Biden's victory in the 2020 presidential election. She made false and unmasked allegations of rigged voting machines and voter fraud. Ellis grew up in Colorado and was raised by her parents. In 2003, she enrolled at Cedarville University before moving to Colorado State University to study journalism. In 2011, she earned a law degree from the University before moving to Colorado State University of Richmond School of Law. [2] From 2012 to 2013, Ellis served as deputy district attorney in Weld County, Colorado. Ellis worked in misdemeanor cases, including traffic-related cases, according to the Weld County District Attorney's Office. Her experience as a prosecutor also included crimes such as assault and theft in state courts. Ellis was released after about six months, which she attributed to her insistence that she would not prosecute a case she considered uneasy. The Weld County District Attorney's Office declined to comment on the matter, according to The Wall Street Journal. Ellis then went to private practice at law firms based in northern Colorado. She defended clients in state courts in cases involving assault, domestic violence, prostitution and theft. [2] According to Ellis, she also worked on immigration and tenancy issues. Records showed that Ellis was involved in about 30 court cases that began in 2012 or 2016, including one state court case; this was described as a rare record by another Colorado lawyer interviewed by The Wall Street Journal. [1] Court records do not indicate that Ellis was involved in election law, federal court cases, or cases in U.S. District or Appeals Courts before December 2020. [2] In 2013, Ellis worked for IE Discovery in one contract dispute lawsuit. IE Discovery is a company that assists the U.S. State Department, though she has no records on her behalf as a State Department employee. In 2015, Ellis became a member of Colorado Christian University's partner division and then an assistant professor of law studies until her departure in 2018. [2] The University does not have a law school. [2] In the same year, Ellis published a book titled The Legal Basis for a Moral Constitution: A for Christians to Understand America's Constitutional Crisis. [1] [2] It argued that the United States Constitution interpreted only according to the Bible. [2] In her view, the U.S. Supreme Court legalizes same-sex marriage in Obergefell. Hodges, was that this would lead to polygamy and paedophilia becoming accepted. In 2016, Ellis described homosexuals as sinners whose behavior is vile and disgusting. Robert Cochran Jr., an expert on Christian law, described Ellis' views as farther to the right than most conservative Christian lawyers. In 2015, Ellis was a harsh critic. In 2015, Ellis wrote on Facebook that Trump was loveless, treacherous, abusive and ungodly. In February 2016, Ellis has spoken out about Trump, such as her belief that she wants to destroy American democracy, is one of the greatest threats to our freedom, can't handle criticism, and wasn't a true Christian because he couldn't repent. To stop Trump from becoming a candidate, Ellis suggested that the Republican Party establish a negotiated convention. In March 2016, Ellis criticized Trump's supporters, saying they DON'T CARE about facts or logic. They are not looking for the truth, but they are narcissism; Support of Trump are ridiculously illogical, inconsistent and grossly silly, and that Trump cannot be trusted to be consistent and accurate in anything. After Trump became a Republican presidential candidate, Ellis expressed support for him in the 2016 general election. In 2017, Ellis became a Washington Examiner, where she falsely claimed to have been a professor of constitutional law in the past. [2] Colorado Christian University does not have a constitutional law program. The New York Times reports that Ellis appeared on a denver radio show as a legal commentator, although the Times does not specify when it was. In 2019, Ellis left Colorado Christian University to work for the James Dobson Institute for the Evangelical Family Institute, as director of public policy. In 2019, Ellis was a frequent Fox News guest. Trump campaign legal adviser Ellis in conversation with Rudy Giuliani Main article: Post-election lawsuits related to the U.S. presidential election in November 2019 Ellis was hired as a senior legal adviser to Trump and his re-election campaign in 2020. [2] Axios reported that Trump was discussing ellis being shaked by media appearances. In December 2019, the Trump campaign paid Ellis $3,900, and in October 2020, she paid her nearly $3,900 $000 for legal advice fees. In November 2020, Ellis received $30,000. Thousand. Mid-November 2020, Ellis acknowledged that she criticized Trump in 2015. stating that her previous opinions were completely wrong because she did not know him personally at the time, and she eventually saw him keeping his promises. The Washington Post report told the following: after all major news organizations predicted a Victory for Trump's chances of victory. Trump's top lawyers were particularly detrained by the defeat of Trump's allies on November 13 at the United States Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit (Bognet v. Boockvar),[13] which found that plaintiffs had no standing to sue under the Constitution's voter clause in the Pennsylvania case. Ellis and Trump's personal lawyer Rudy Giuliani were much more optimistic about their prospects. A Washington Post report described Ellis as Giuliani's protégé. On November 14, Trump announced a legal team that would challenge the legitimacy of the results of the team, along with Joseph diGenova, Victoria Toensing, Sidney Powell and team leader Giuliani. According to The Washington Post, after Trump's announcement, Ellis and Giuliani privately conducted a hostile takeover of the Trump campaign from other Trump's post-election actions. On November 19, Ellis spoke at a press conference alongside Powell and Giuliani, and Giuliani said all three represent Trump and his campaign. Ellis and Giuliani stated on November 22 that Powell is not a member of Trump's legal team, nor is he Trump's legal team, nor is he Trump's legal team. established a great relationship with the judge. [14] After Republican pollster Frank Luntz mocked Ellis' comment and Trump's lawsuit in Pennsylvania was dismissed by a judge, Ellis accused Luntz of MicroPenis syndrome. Ellis has previously stated that she will not tolerate insults on social media. During the Michigan case, trump's campaign asked for permission to change the complaint, but mistakenly signed the judge's name as if he had already allowed them to do so. Ellis argued that this was not a mistake, but in fact a courtesy for the judge's name, indicating that their previous signature was indeed a mistake. [17] Since December The Trump campaign and its allies have launched about 50 election-related lawsuits; However, Ellis as mostly doing public relations work for the Trump campaign. On December 8, 2020, Axios reported that Ellis had told colleagues that she had tested positive for COVID-19. ABC News and CNN confirmed the story to Axios. Earlier on December 4, Ellis attended an event at the White House without a mask, while on December 6, it was reported that Giuliani had tested positive for COVID-19. Meanwhile, in late November, Ellis and Giuliani ignored the CDC's U.S. guidelines to quarantine, even though they had close contact with a well-known COVID-19 case: Boris Epshteyn, Trump's campaign adviser.
