Tick-tock, tick-tock. The countdown to holiday purchases has begun. If you want to hit a lot on new headphones or headphones, you're lucky. You can still find big discounts on headphones such as Beats Solo 3, as well as models from other big brands including Bose, Sony and Samsung. Sales are not limited to only one type of headset or headset. There are still excellent deals on ear, ear and over-ear styles, as well as noise-canceling and real-wireless options. It costs less than $100, some even run 50 or less. Newer offerings have included new (or reverse) price cuts on some Beats models. In some cases, prices for headphones and headphones match or even move below their low prices for all time. Here are the best deals for headphones and headphones available now. We will continue to update this list as more models will be sold and other contracts will expire. Sarah Tew/CNET's Sarah Tew/Beats Solo 3 has been out for several years (the Solo Pro model, which is also on sale, is the latest model on the ear from Beats). You can nab the black version for $119, which is right around the lowest price we've seen for Solo 3. Jason Outenreath/CNET Samsung's Galaxy Buds Live earplugs came out a few months ago and we're already seeing them at a discount. For Cyber Monday, $60 was off at Woot (this deal has expired) and now they are back at $40 off at Amazon. They have perhaps the most innovative design of the year and I have highly rated them, although the cancelled noise is relatively light. Word of warning: While we fit my ears well, because of its beanlike shape, they won't work for everyone. Read our Galaxy Buds Live review. Now Playing: Check It Out: Galaxy Buds Live are the most innovative real wireless... Samsung's Galaxy Buds Plus/CNET Samsung has been out for some time, but they remain one of the better real wireless options for earplugs for money, with really good sound, quality and battery along with comfortable fits. They are solid value for $100 or $50 off their list price. A deal that's close to the lowest price we've seen for them. Read our Samsung Galaxy Buds Plus review. Sony If you can't afford Sony's WH-1000XM4, less expensive WH-CH710N headphones are available for a nice discount, which stop the noise. They don't offer sound quality, build quality or noise-cancelling of Sony's 1000X models, but at $88 they offer good value for money. I don't think they're worth anywhere near $200, their price. They do not include any carrier case or slide. Amazon Skullcandy's Sesh Evo says wireless earplugs are typically around $50-$60. In reality, they do not differentiate from many other earbuds in this price range, some of which have additional functions, such as active noise failure (mpow X3, for example). But at $30, it's a relative bargain. They were as low as $25 recently, so that's not their lowest price, but it's close. They sound decent enough to fit most ears pretty well, have an IP55 water resistance assessment (meaning they can maintain a long water spray) and are equipped with Tile technology to help you find them if you stock them. They are available in several different colors. David Carnoy/CNET So the new Bose quietComfort earbuds and sports earbuds are good for exercise, thanks to the advice of StayHear Max and safe connection, but sports earbuds are more compact and lighter and also more affordable (QuietComfort Earbuds have excellent active noise cancel). This is the first time we've seen sports earbuds at a discount. Unlike its progressive sis, Sports earbuds do not have active noise canceling or wireless charging and give an hour less battery life at 5 hours instead of 6. While sticking out of your ears, they are much smaller and lighter than QuietComfort earplugs and their case is about 30% to 40% smaller. It's still not as small as examples for such competitors as the AirPods Pro, Samsung Galaxy Buds Plus, Galaxy Buds Live and Jabra Elite 75t, but it feels reasonably compact. Read our Bose Sport Earbuds review. Sarah Tew/CNET The AirPods Pro was briefly as low as $169 at Walmart and $170 at Amazon for Black Friday. Now they have been ping-ponging between $190 and $199, with Amazon currently selling them for $199. That's still $50 below the regular Apple Store price. Read our AirPods Pro review. David Carnoy/CNET David Carnoy/CNET The Beats Powerbeats Pro ($250 price) remains a premium true-wireless sports model with many of the same features as Apple's standard AirPods, but in a waterproof design with better sound. Lava red color, spring yellow or moss green options for $150. Read our Review of Beats Powerbeats Pro. Sarah Tew/CNET Companies such as Under Armour (with the help of JBL) have released sports models on their ears aimed at people who want this type of safe fit for a workout that covers their These adidas RPT-01 headphones are slightly too expensive at their price of $170, but they are a good deal at $100. Made from the same Swedish company that makes Urbanears headphones, they sound quite decent, with a well-balanced sound that doesn't push bass too much. The headphones on my ears have got rid of me comfortably, which is not usually as comfortable as headphones with an ear, but those with larger heads may feel a little too tight on both the head and the ears. This IPX4-certified sweat-resistant headset kit, and the earpads and inner headband are removable and rinsed (there are instructions on how to do this, but Adidas needs to do how to make a video). RPT-01 headphones are available in three colors. David Carnoy/Sony's latest David Carnoy/CNET headset -- and probably premium noise-cancelling headphones -- recently sold for $278, and that price is back! Read our sony WH-1000XM4 review. The Sony WF-XB700 earbuds are on the Company's Extra Bass line and listed for $130. I tried them and I liked their touch. They do not measure up to models WF-1000XM3 or WF-SP800N in sound quality, because they lack some clarity, but if you love bass, they are decent-sounding. I thought they were expensive at $130. At $67 off, they are much more vauy. $63 is their low price. First read our Sony WF-XB700 Extra Bass. Sarah Tew/CNET Bose's flagship noise-canceling headphones sold for $380 after starting with a list price of $400, but now you can pick them up for $339 (the white version was as low as $299 recently). The Sony WH-1000XM4 headset was on sale for as much as $278 -- that's probably a better deal when it comes back -- but if you had an eye on that Bose model, that's a decent price. Read our Bose Noise Cancelling 700 review. Sarah Tew/CNET The Beats Solo Pro have a very good set of headphones for noise canceling on the ears. The only problem is, they're overvalued at $300. At $180, they're much more vauent. That's below the previous sale price of $200, which we saw a few weeks ago, but they made $170 for a few days. Read our Beats Solo Pro review. David Carnoy/CNET If you can't afford Sennheiser's $300 Momentum True Wireless II, earplugs of the same brand CX 400BT are a more affordable option that also bring great sound (but they are a little light bulb). They're a little expensive at a price of $200, but I had a feeling they're going to see some discounts this holiday season, but now they're $75 off, which is great. Read our review of sennheiser CX 400BT. Although they have been out for more than a year, Plantronics's BackBeat Fit 6,100 over-the-ear wireless headphones are a solid choice for both the gym and everyday use. The adjustable sports-fitting head strap has a waterproof and sweaty shape that is resistant to IPX5. Headphones equipped with 40mm at the angle of the drivers and the noise-insulating ear, with an awareness mode. The battery life is estimated at 24 hours. I thought they were expensive at $180, but they're worth $90. Last year's Black Friday sold for $110. Sarah Tew/CNET List of WF-1000XM3 earbuds for $230 and are now widely on sale, although $168 is close to their low price. They are still the best sounding wireless earbuds in this price range and also have active noise canceling technology to reduce noise in the environment. They use Bluetooth 5.0 with support for AAC, but not aptX. The only weakness is that they are not rated as waterproof sweat or waterproof. I used them for light workouts with a little sweat in the gym without any problems. Please note that we expected Sony to release the next-generation WF-1000XM4 earplugs, but we may not see them until 2021 at this time. Read our sony WF-1000XM3 review. David Carnoy/CNET It took a while, but now finally we have a new real wireless sports model that cancels the noise from Sony: earpluffs WF-SP800N. The funny thing is, at the end of my mostly positive reviews I'd like to see more in the range of $160-175. They recently went down to $127, but the current price of $148 is still $50 below the list, and $20 below their usual street price. These aren't clean WF-1000XM3 earbuds with a water-resistant body -- they're missing sony's QN1e processor -- but they still have a lot to like about them, including excellent sound, solid noise failure and good call quality. They are certainly an important upgrade to the WF-SP700N model, which came out in

2018, and their arches (sporting fine) lock buds in their ears. Just make sure you get tightly leaked from one of the included ear tip sets or both sound and noise failure will lack dilute. Read our sony WF-SP800N review. Amazon's Echo Buds were a little expensive at $130, but they're certainly more expensive at $80. They are one of the better real wireless models for calls, in part because they are equipped with Bose noise-cancelling technology. They also have always-made Alexa, so you don't have to press the Amazon voice assistant button. Amazon's six-month Music Unlimited service is included for free for new subscribers. Read our Amazon Echo Buds review. David Carnoy/CNET Swedish company Urbanista's London real wireless earbuds are a good alternative to AirPods at less than half the price. They look a lot like the Apple AirPods Pro and have noise failure with transparency mode, as well as a sensor that detects when you take earplugs out of your ears and pause the music for you. They sound better than the AirPods Pro, with clean, well-balanced sound and striking, well-defined basses and beautiful details. In addition, they are good for germs, with good noise reduction, so you hear well, even though there is in the background. Their only side is that their touch controls are somewhat limited and not as easy to use as the AirPods Pro. They also sound different when you have them in ambient (transparent) mode and noise cancel mode. Battery life is estimated at 5 hours -- the same as the AirPods Pro -- but it's not as good as some of the latest real wireless earbuds with noise failure. The compact charging case, which is charged via USB-C, gives you an additional four charges. On Amazon, there's a sporadic 20% off instant coupon that lowers the price to $80, so it might be worth the wait. Sarah Tew/CNET Bose's Noise Canceling 700 Headphones ($379) are the company's current flagship noise-cancelling headphones, but in recent weeks we've seen older but probably more comfortable QuietComfort 35 II get big discounts. The Model 700 is now only $199, which is the lowest we've seen for this model. Note that with Sony discounting its new WH-1000XM4 headset to $278, we might see the Uproar of the 700 Handsets also get some nice discounts when we go into vacation. Read our quietComfort 35 II review. Amazon Skullcandy's Indy and Indy Evo ears are on sale for $35 and $50, respectively. I think it's worth spending an extra $5 on the newer Indy Evo buds. I didn't think they were a good offer at their price of $80, but they're a decent value of $50 and should fit the ears of most people. They are available in several colors at this sale price. Sarah Tew/CNET This is a great price for jaybird vista, one of our top runners. This is a good set of real wireless sports earbuds that lock you in your ears and are completely waterproof. The Vista model has been out for some time, so the upgrade -- it may be on sale -- but if a new model arrives soon, it's likely to cost about $180. Read our review of Jaybird Vista. The David Carnoy/CNET Headphones Jabra Elite 45h were released a few months ago and are now on sale for $90, a 10% discount on their list price of $100 (although they recently sold for as much as $80). This is one of the best earpiece values at the moment: They have good sound quality, a stanced design and a comfortable fit as the ear-to-ear headphones go. In addition, the phone calls are very well executed and the sideton feature allows you to hear the voice in the headset so you don't talk too loudly. Battery life is good, too. Amazon Sennheiser has updated its well-rated 4,50BTNC headset to cancel noise for 2020. The new 450BT headsets have some interesting upgrades, including better battery life (up to 30 hours by turning on noise), USB-C charging, Bluetooth 5.0 with AptX support for devices such as Samsung Galaxy smartphones that support it and a more comfortable earpad. They're still not as comfortable as sennheiser's headphones. 450BT A list of headphones for $200, but usually sell for about $150, so they are really $50 off. They sound very good for money. Amazon If you're looking for an AirPods Pro alternative for much less, JLab's Epic Air earbuds are well worth considering, especially at just $50, or half off the price on the $100 list. I've been using them lately and I've been generally excited, partly because they fit very well on my ears. They are comfortable and have a wide selection of ear tip. They also sound decent, have active noise canceling and come with a compact wireless charging case that can also be filled with an integrated USB cable, a JLab brand of real wireless earbuds. Don't expect to be as good at noise canceling as the AirPods Pro, but for $50 these are very good value. They also work quite well on calls, although their background noise reduction could be slightly better. The Earbuds Elite Active 75t David Carnoy/CNET Jabra are more ruthless versions of the Elite 75t. Both models are among the best real wireless earbuds out there and can now be upgraded with active noise through a software upgrade. (New models that have recently been shied into warehouses may already be equipped with an upgrade.) Elite Active 75t buds look almost identical to elite 75t, but on closer inspection you will notice that the target is on the case and the earbuds are different. Instead of the hard smooth end of the Elite Active 75t, the Active 75t has a soft touch with a touch of grip. Or, as Jabra said, earpluxs are built with a durable coating for dust and sweat resistance and [feature] an increased IP water resistance rating from IP56 (from Elite Active 75t) to IP57, making them waterproof. Read our review of Jabra Elite Active 75t. JBL's Amazon Live 300 real wireless earbuds are out last year and are sporadic on sale for $100. Now $75 is the lowest price we've seen for them. They sound good and are suitable for sports use with included sports fine and IPX5 water resistance assessment (which means they can withstand a durable water spray). The battery life is rated at 6 hours and has an ambient-aware mode that leaves some sound for safety purposes. The Sarah Tew/CNET Jabra Elite 85h headphones are a good value alternative to pricier premium headphones that cancel noise from Bose and Sony. They have a good sound, a comfortable fit and excellent voice-calling performance, which makes them a good chance to work from home. Read our Jabra Elite 85h review. David Carnoy/CNET Mpow X3 truly wireless earbuds sound shockingly good for the price. They have good clarity and strong bass -- not to mention that I play pretty loudly -- and they even have an active noise waiver that's quite effective. (No, it's not as good as the Pro's AirPods, but not bad.) They were on our list of the best cheap earbuds for a while. Now there's a new white version that costs more than a black model and is actually upgraded in important ways. The new X3 has better battery life, a new mode of transparency and improved connectivity. Control has also been improved. More recommendations
