The original first edition published by Alfred Knopf contains illustrations by Nancy Ekholm Burkert. Over the years, versions of it have been re-energetic, done by Michael Simeon for the first British edition, Emma Chichester Clark, Lane Smith and Quentin Blake. It was adapted into a film of the same name in 1996, and a musical in 2010. The plot centers on a young English orphan boy entering a giant, magical peach, and have a wild and surreal cross-world adventure with seven magically-changed garden errors he met. Roald Dahl was originally planning to write about a giant cherry, but changed it to James and the Giant Peach because a peach is more beautiful, bigger and squishier than a cherry. [2] Because of the story's and then macabre and potentially terrifying content, it became a regular target of sensors. [4] Dahl dedicated the book to his six-year-old daughter, Olivia, who was dedicated only a year after the book was published. [5] Summary James Henry Trotter is a boy who lives happily with his parents in a house through the sea. Unfortunately, when he is four years old, an escaped rhino eats from the zoo james' parents and he ends with his two cruel aunts, Spiker and Sponge. Instead of caring for him, they treat him badly, feed him improrotly and force him to sleep on bare floorboards. After James lived with his aunts for three years, he met a mysterious man who gave him green beans and said that if he would drink it, his life would change for the better. As he went to his house, he and the beans fell on a peach tree. The tree in turn produces a single peach that soon grows to the size of a house. Spiker and Sponge build fences around it and earn money by selling tickets to tourists, giving them the chance to see the peach. James was locked in his home and saw the peach through the bars of his bedroom window. After the tourists went, James was assigned to clean the garbage and find a tunnel in the peach. He enters it. Meet Centipede, Miss Spider, Old Green Grasshopper, Earthworm, Ladybird, Glowworm, and Silkworm who becomes his friends. The next day, day, cut the trunk of the peach, causing it to roll down and fatal James' aunts. It reaches the sea where sharks surround it. James uses Miss Spider and Silkworm to make wires, while Earthworm is used as bait and draws 501 hippos near the peach, after which the wires are tied on their necks. The peaches are lifted from the water and Centipede falls off, but is later rescued by James. The peaches go into the clouds and meet cloud men demons. Then Centipede mocks those who anger them, and they start throwing hail stones on the peach. James succeeded in pulling the peach on the bottom part of the sky and realising they had reached New York City. People think it was a bomb and warned the others to evacuate. Police personnel and firefighters arrive and see the peaches, causing some to faint. Then Comes James and tells the whole story and becomes friends with many children in New York, and they eat the peach and James and his friends get their own job. The cast includes Simon Bell playing James, Bernard Cribbins playing Centipede, and Anna Quayle playing Aunt Spiker. [7] Although Roald Dahl refused numerous offers during his life to have a film version of James and the Giant Peach, his widow, Felicity Dahl, approved an offer to have a film adaptation produced in collaboration with Disney in the mid-1990s. It was directed and produced by Henry Selick by Denise Di Novi and Tim Burton, both formerly The Nightmare Before Christmas. The movie consists of live action and stop movement to reduce production finances. [9] It was interpreted by Pete Postlethwaite (who also played the magician). The film was released on 12 April 1996. [10] Although it box office flop, it received positive reviews and eventually had a Classic. There are numerous changes in both the plot of the film and the plot of the book, although the film is generally well received. Felicity Dahl said, I think Roald would have been delighted with what they did with James. [8] Owen Gleiberman of Entertainment Weekly gave the film a positive review and praised the animated part, but called the vibrant segments rude. [11] The movie was nominated for an Academy Award for Best Original Musical or Comedy Count (by Randy Newman). It won best animated film at the Anney International Animated Film Festival. In August 2016, Sam Mendes was revealed in negotiations with Disney to direct another live action adaptation of the novel,[12] with Nick Hornby in conversations with the script. [13] In May 2017, however, Mendes was no longer attached to the project due to his entering discussions with Disney over the directing of a live film adaptation of Pinocchio. [14] Musical adaptation Main Article: James and the Giant Peach (musical) The book was made in a musical with music and lyrics by Benj Pasek and Justin Paul and book by Timothy Allen McDonald. The musical has its premiere at Goodspeed Musicals on October 21, 2010 and is currently in the local and youth theatre. [15] Charitable Reading In May 2020, amid the Coronavirus pandemic, Taika Waititi, the Oscar-winning director, worked with the Roald Dahl Story Company to publish audiovisual lectures of the book. Waititi was joined by numerous well-known guests in ten instalments that were then published to the Roald Dahl official Youtube Channel. Guests included Oscar-winning actresses Meryl Streep, Lupita Nyong'o and Cate Blanchett; Actors Benedict Cumberbatch, Liam and Chris Hemsworth, Ryan Reynolds; the Duchess of Cornwall; and many more. The event was arranged to raise money for the global non-profit Partners in Health, founded by Dahl's daughter Ophelia, who fed COVID-19 in vulnerable areas; with Roald Dahl Story Co. committed to donations to $1million[17]. Waititi has already worked with the company as the author, director and executive producer for Netflix's upcoming seriate adaptation of Charlie and the Chocolate Factory.
