Clover Park Technical College is accredited by the Northwest Commission on Colleges and Universities. Accreditation of a higher education institution The Northwest Commission on Colleges and Universities indicates that it meets or exceeds the criteria for institutional quality assessment evaluated through a peer review process. An accredited college or university is one that has the resources to achieve its stated goals through appropriate educational programs, is doing so substantially and provides reasonable evidence that it will continue to do so in the near future. Institutional integrity is also addressed through accreditation. Accreditation by the Northwest Commission on Colleges and Universities is not partial, but applies to the institution as a whole. As such, it is not a guarantee of every course or program offered, or the competence of individual graduates. Rather, it provides reasonable assurance as to the quality of opportunities available to students attending the institution. Investigations into an institution's accredited status by the Northwest Commission on Colleges and Universities should be directed to the institution's administrative staff. VIEW PROGRAMS Clover Park Technical CollegeLakewood, Washington Clover Park Technical College received confirmation on January 29 of its reaffirmation of accreditation by the Northwest Commission on Colleges and The accreditation process included a three-day on-site assessment in October by a team of seven members of regional college faculty and administrators. The evaluation team met with various campus groups to gain a better understanding of the college. Open forums were held for students, faculty, university staff and administrators. Being regionally accredited is the golden standard for higher education The president of the CPTC, Dr. Lonnie L. Howard, said. This is great news for our college and even better news for our students. The peer evaluation report provided by the accreditation team praised CPTC for the beauty of its campuses and the culture of respect for students created by faculty, administration, staff, and students. They also praised the college's strong connection and support to the local and state business and industrial community, and for the library faculty and staff who create collaborative, welcoming, and program support services. CPTC's technology, support, equipment and facilities that improve student learning and workforce preparation were also praised, along with quality education that improves students' commitment to learning and prepares students for a successful transition to the workplace. CpTC was first granted accreditation through NWCCU in 1999. The status demonstrates adherence to quality standards and allows college to receive federal student aid.
