Futures tracking the S&P 500 and Nasdaq were at record levels Monday as President Donald Trump's move to sign a long-awaited $2.3 trillion pandemic support bill bolstered bets on a vaccine-led economic recovery. In a sudden reversal late Sunday, Trump backed down from his earlier threat to block the bill, restore unemployment benefits to millions of Americans and averted a federal government shutdown. Michael Gove said the Government wanted to ensure we can get children back to school as early as possible and that ministers were working with teachers and headteachers. Under current plans, primary and secondary school pupils and year 11 and 13 pupils will return to the classroom on January 4, with the majority starting online to enable the rollout of mass testing. Elsewhere, a government expert has warned that her immunity to Covid-19 in the UK through vaccinations is unlikely to be achieved before next summer. Arsenal are looking to kick-start their season after returning to winning ways with a brilliant triumph over Chelsea on Boxing Day. The Gunners had endured an agonising run that success is their first in the league since November 1, and Mikel Arteta has said he hopes it proves a turning point. The Spaniard put his face on youngsters like Emile Smith Rowe, Gabriel Martinelli and Bukayo Saka to produce some hard-fought combat, and it seemed a treat. Dr. James Phillips called out Donald Trump for sending the wrong message to the public, calling it a dangerous moveFrom subtle tweaks to the outright obvious, here are the biggest photo editing flops of the year. (Bloomberg) - U.S. stock futures and global equities pushed higher Monday after President Donald Trump signed a coronavirus stimulus package. S&P 500 contracts rose after Trump backed down from last-minute demands and approved the combined $2.3 trillion Covid-19 relief and government funding package. Germany's DAX index rose to a record and the MSCI Asia Pacific Index rose 0.3%. Treasury yields climbed while the dollar stabilized. Alibaba Group Holding Ltd slipped in Hong Kong despite increasing its share buyback program to $10 billion, amid ongoing concern over China's investigation into alleged monopolistic practices. Chinese regulators over the weekend ordered affiliate Ant Group Co. to return to its roots as a provider of payment services, a development that threatens to cut its growth. In cryptocurrencies, bitcoin kept rallying over the festive break and soared past $28,000 on Sunday before he retired. The signing of the US legislation averts a further delay in and reinforces some of the optimism that drove global equities to a record this month, even as the pandemic escalates. In approving the bill, Trump also demanded a vote in Congress to replace the planned $600 in direct stimulus payments with $2,000 - a non-binding request that is unlikely to pass both chambers. The stimulus could support the market, supporting the U.S. economy, said Suresh Tania, strategist at Credit Suisse Group AG. Next year all the building blocks are there for markets to continue this rally. On the coronavirus front, several restrictions are imposed to combat the spread of the new, more contagious strain. Japan is among the latest to act, banning the entry of most foreigners through the end of January. Meanwhile, the European Union launched a vaccination campaign for the entire continent less than a week after clearing a shot developed by Pfizer Inc. and BioNTech SE. Elsewhere, the pound swung after Britain last week blocked a historic Brexit deal with the EU. Oil advanced and gold was little changed.
