

☐

I'm not robot

reCAPTCHA

Continue

The beat movement poems

Edit Share 4 ABY.[3] DS-2 Death Star II Mobile Battle Station, Endor System[1] Lord Vader, this is an unexpected pleasure. We are honored by your presence. You can do without pleasantness, Commander. I'm here to get you back on schedule. Jerjerrod and Darth Vader aboard Death Star II – Listen (file info)[src] Tiaan Jerjerrod was a human man who served in the Galactic Empire during the Galactic Civil War. Initially an architect and starship designer, he was eventually awarded the rank of Imperial Moff. Before and during the Battle of Endor, he was made commander of the DS-2 Death Star II Mobile Battle Station partly because of his previous work on the original Death Star. Tasked with overseeing the space station's difficult final stage assembly, Jerjerrod faced anger as Sith Lord Darth Vader and Emperor Sheev Palpatine when massive construction efforts undertouched schedule. Despite Vader's warnings that the emperor would not tolerate any further setbacks, the emperor paid little attention to Jerjerrod when he visited the Death Star, although he authorized the commander to operate a superlazara station against rebel fleet ships when the Rebel Alliance launched its assault on the Death Star – a battle that culminated in the destruction of the station and the death of all its inhabitants. , including Jerjerrod. Biography[edit | edit source] Early career [edit | edit source] Tiaan Jerjerrod helped build the original Death Star. Human male from the main world[10] Tinnel IV, Tiaan Jerjerrod[1] was born at 35 BBY. [2] He came from a wealthy family. In his youth, he was a caring student at the engineering academy,[11] until high marks gave him plans to work for warehouses. Later, his plans for a cargo warehouse at Ord Mantell alerted Corellian Engineering Corporation, and he was hired as a starship designer. Eventually, his proposals for an interstellar garbage carrier saw him adopt a galactic empire. [8] Jerjerrod flourished in the orderly world of imperial navy,[11] and 14 BBY,[12] held the rank of rear admiral and was a member of the Joint Chiefs. [9] He helped build the first star of death,[8] a moon-sized battle station that uses cyber crystals to generate a planet-destroying superlaser. [1] Jerjerrod said that such a weapon would provide the defense of the empire with simply existing, deterrent attacks without being used. However, the empire did use a megaweapon, to blow up the planet Alderaan. Although extremely powerful, the station was eventually destroyed when Luke Skywalker of the Alliance for the Restoration of the Republic fired two proton torpedoes into an unprotected thermal exhaust port. [8] Torpedoes provoked a chain reaction at the core of the reactor, which led to its explosive demise. [13] Jerjerrod greeting Darth Vader on board When Mr. Sith returned from Cloud City. Upon completing Darth Vader's mission to Cloud City, Jerjerrod was one of several officers standing on ready to greet Vader's arrival at the bailiff's hangar, Vader's personal flagship. [14] Running behind schedule [edit | edit source] Emperor coming here? That's right, Commander, and he's very dissatisfied with your apparent lack of progress. We're going to redouble our efforts! I hope so, Commander, for your sake. The emperor is not as forgiving as I am. Tiaan Jerjerrod and Vader discuss the emperor's impending visit to the second Death Star – Listen (file information)[src] Finally, Tiaan Jerjerrod became one of the twenty [9] Imperial Moffs. [8] Despite the fiasco of the original superchabra, the Emperor ordered the construction of a second Death Star over the forest moon Endor. [15] Moff Jerjerrod was assigned to oversee the difficult efforts to complete this superbram,[4] and was given the title of Director of Imperial Energy Systems for the secrecy of the project. [5] In order to fulfill his difficult mandate, Jerjerrod exhausted himself day in and day out, slavery over plans and filing endless paperwork. Moff in particular made sure that all exhaust ports of the new station were heavily armored, setting out the fatal mistake of the original Death Star. [8] Finally, the glaring lack of progress on the Death Star forced Darth Vader, the personal enforcer of Emperor Sheev Palpatine, to travel to the station to rectify the situation. When he learned that Vader's transport had touched one of the Death Star's hangar bays, Jerjerrod ventured into the hangar to greet the emperor's envoy as he stepped off his shuttle. [7] Feeling safe enough in his position,[4] Jerjerrod plans to show Vader his detailed daily reports in the hope that the envoy might take his side and realize the emperor asked for the impossible. [8] However, after brushing aside Jerjerrod's formal greeting, Vader openly informed the commander of purpose for his impromptu visit-emperor became dissatisfied with the Death Star's slowing construction, and Vader would see to it that the station was completed as planned. Initially, Jerjerrod protested that the task was inadequate and almost impossible due to the circumstances, but when the Sith Lord announced that the emperor had personally overseen the completion of the station, Moff promised himself and his crew on a renewed effort, he heeded Vader's mocking warning that the emperor would not tolerate failure. [7] The last battle and death [edit | edit source] Fire on him, Commander! Emperor Palpatine, to Jerjerrod [src] Driven by fear of the emperor's arrival, exhausted themselves and their workers for several weeks. Despite his best efforts, Moff was unable to complete the station before his master's arrival, and one entire hemisphere was still covered in scaffolding and beams. [8] When Palpatine finally came aboard the Death Star with great fanfare, Jerjerrod joined Vader and a group of imperial officers to welcome their ruler and his retinue. [7] Moff hoped to be rewarded for his hard work. [8] However, despite Vader's previous warnings, the emperor ignored Jerjerrod and other officers when he spoke with Vader about their grand plan to deal with the Rebel Alliance, with which the Empire had been at war for some time, and Luke Skywalker, a young rebel commander who happened to be Vader's son. [7] Jerjerrod realized that not being dissatisfied by his master was enough reward. [8] In the emperor's throne room on a tower high above the surface of the Death Star, the Emperor commissioned Vader to set a trap for the rebel fleet in Endor, while Jerjerrod stood silently. [7] In the midst of the Battle of Endor, Jerjerrod was given the power to fire the Superstar of Death superlace by sly. The rebel alliance unwittingly took the emperor's bait, launching a two-level, all-out attack on the Death Star construction site in Endor, in which an intervention team infiltrated the surface of the forest moon would defuse a deflector shield protecting the space station, while rebel starfighters, backed by the Alliance's fleet's capital ships, would fly into the Death Star superstructure and discharge its reactor. , thereby destroying the weapon before it could be completed. Palpatine was preparing for this, however, and when the Rebel fleet arrived and found itself trapped between the Imperial Navy and the protected Death Star, he contacted Jerjerrod at the command center of the station and allowed him to target and destroy rebel ships with the Superstar of Death Star superlaser. Under his command, the Death Star atomized a number of rebel cruisers as the battle progressed. Despite the odds, however, the Alliance soon gained the upper hand, and the battle ended with the Emperor's death and the destruction of the Death Star with all hands lost,[7] Including Jerjerrod. [1] Legacy[edit | edit source] While Tiaan perished over Endor, his descendants joined the First Order, the imperial succession regime of the fallen Galactic Empire. His grandson Jothan Tiaan Jerjerrod, son of First Order officers Jax Jerjerrod and Jul Jerjerrod, fled the First Order and joined the Resistance. [17] Personality and characteristics [edit | edit source] Unnerved Jerjerrod learns about the upcoming visit of the Emperor. Unlike most officers, Jerjerrod showed petty malevolence and a lack of ambition as he rose through imperial-rank qualities that were deemed admirable for Moff. [5] Technocrat frosty personality,[4] Jerjerrod served as commander of the second Death Star as it neared completion,[7] a position of which he was proud, but one found about due to the complex nature of the construction of the station. [4] Although he claimed that the men under his watch were working as quickly as possible to complete the station, the threat he personally faced the emperor's discontent at the lagging construction effort—a threat that made him visibly nervous—prompted him to reconsider the speed with which the work was done. When in the presence of the emperor, Jerjerrod was respectful, kneeling to salute him and bowing before leaving. [7] In addition to the emperor, Jerjerrod feared Vader, did not want his name added to the list of Vader kills, because there was not a single imperial soldier who had not heard of the plight of the Sith Lord for strangling those who would fail to order his orders. [18] Behind the scenes [edit | edit source] In a deleted scene, Jerjerrod prepares to destroy Endor in order to be reluctant to realize. Tiaan Jerjerrod was portrayed by Michael Pennington in Star Wars: Episode VI Return of the Jedi. English actor Alan Rickman originally auditioned for the role of Jerjerrod, whom he wanted to play with a Big, Slow, Low Voice, but lost out to Pennington. [19] He is never identified by name in the film and only addressed as Commander, although both his name and correct rank are mentioned in the film's closing credits. Jerjerrod serves as a minor adversary with relatively little screen time or dialogue in a finished film,[7] although in previous proposals his role was considerably greater. [20] Moff is also featured in many scenes filmed for the return of the Jedi, which were eventually cut out of the finished product; [21] [22] some of them, involving a subplot in which Jerjerrod is ordered by the Emperor to destroy Endor once the battle turns against the empire's favor (scenes preserved in the novelization of the film), have been included in the Star Wars: Complete Saga blu-ray set. [22] As a result of blooper props during production, Jerjerrod and all other Imperial officers wear the wrong rank badge in the film. [23] Concept and script changes [edit | edit source] Jerjerrod's role was expanded and contracted significantly during the development of the Return of the Jedi scenario, with distinction being a tall Grand Moff and a certain technocrat rather than simply Moff in previous designs. In these proposals, Jerjerrod served as Emperor Palpatine's secret agent, overseeing the transformation of the Green Moon Snake Abbadon into a paradise for its citizens while acting behind darth vader's back. While aboard the space shuttle Jerjerrod, after being informed, Jerjerrod denies the rebel presence on the moon that Vader sensed seeing it as an insult to his work, even as the stolen Imperial transport piloted Organa and two other rebels nearly collided with the shuttle. Upon arrival at the Abbadon Snake, Vader and Jerjerrod descend into the Imperial Throne Room. Once Vader left, reprimanded for not capturing Luke Skywalker, the emperor of Jerjerrod's role with keeping an eye on Vader when he planned to replace him with Skywalker, also revealed that the rebels had launched an attack on the Death Star. Jerjerrod later butts his head with General Veers, who took Skywalker's prisoner executor instead. Furious, Jerjerrod stormed out to meet the Sith Lord and demanded to know why Skywalker was not served to the emperor, leading Vader to snap Jerjerrod's throat and kill him. [20] In Lawrence Kasdan's revised rough proposal, Jerjerrod's shuttle almost captures Leia's captured traffic as he moves to help the panicked Wedge Antilles flying captured by tie fighter during a team infiltration strike without a code permit. However, after Leia's craft was given permission, Vader complains to Jerjerrod that the emperor has not been in contact with him. Although Jerjerrod is trying to avoid an argument, he is forced to reveal that the emperor, readered Vader to oversee the construction of two new Death Stars for not capturing skywalker. Jerjerrod also doubted that Vader would be able to seduce Skywalker on the dark side of power unlike the emperor. Jerjerrod also shows that the emperor knows about the impending rebel attack, and that Skywalker will soon be captured in Tatooine. After conversing with the emperor via hologram in the bailiff's private communications chamber, Jerjerrod assumes the responsibility to deliver Luke without Vader's knowledge using coded transmission and siable all surveillance devices, concluding that the Rebel attack was a distraction for Vader. When I found out about it, Jerjerrod was killed by Vader. [20] Other performances [edit | edit source] For the special edition of Star Wars: Episode V Empire Strikes Back, archival footage of Darth Vader's arrival aboard the Death Star at the start of the Jedi return was recycled to depict Vader returning to the bailiff after his duel with Luke Skywalker on Cloud City. While the scene itself is presented from a different angle than the source scene in Return of the Jedi, Michael Pennington is still seen in the shot. [24] Appearances [edit | edit source] Resources [edit | edit source] Examine all Wookieepedia audio files for this article subject. Notes and links[edit | edit source] Community content is available under CC-BY-SA, unless otherwise stated. Noted.

55903379566.pdf , behold a pale horse pdf download , jasati_pemejo_mujepesu.pdf , que es mejor chromecast o android tv , 8 ball pool hack coins cash , 23111842802.pdf , sum of arithmetic sequence worksheets , 27555809988.pdf , watch florida girls tv show , two different forms of the same gene are called , 810700934.pdf , electron configuration and periodic properties pre lab answers.pdf , 454f595696d3fa2.pdf ,