Egyptian hieroglyph by, fish Phoenician daleth Greek Delta Etruscan D Roman D The Semitic letter Daleth may have evolved from the logogram for a fish or a door. There are many different Egyptian hieroglyphs that might have inspired it. In Semitic, Ancient Greek and Latin, the letter represents / d / ; in the Etrusian alphabet, the letter was redundant, but still retained (see letter B). The equivalent Greek letter is Delta, Δ . The minuscule (lower case) form of 'd' consists of a loop and a long vertical stroke. It develops through gradual variations on the male (capital) form. In handwriting, it was common to start the arc at the left side of the vertical stroke, resulting in a serif at the top of the arc. This serif was extended while reducing the rest of the letter, resulting in an angled stroke and loop. The angular stroke slowly developed into a vertical stroke.
