Jumping to the main content Using butterfly wings and earthy textures, the interior designer evokes a virtual portrait of Brazil in the sun-drenched room of his apartment September 1, 2011A living room interior designer Alberto Pinto's Rio de Janeiro apartment, which was renovated by architect Thiago Bernardes of Bernardes + Jacobsen. The Nancy Graves painting hangs above Pinto's designed sofa, and the dark wood chairs of William Haines. The open stairs are polished chrome. At one end of the living room under a Marc Quinn painting, a Pinto designed for daláp pillows made from recycled vintage leopard coats; The chairs of T. H. Robsjohn-Gibbings, and the candlesticks of Kenzo Takada in Baccarat.Overlooking the Cagarras archipelago, the Marcel Coard table is home to an ivory turtle, an Art Deco vase, and sculptural coconut de mer seeds. Antique fabric from India spreads pillows in the television room; Hubert le Gall designed the Romulus mirror. Made of butterfly wings, the dining room's striped panels create visual interest while hiding shelves for porcelain and silver. The woven rope carpet is topped with a Brazilian white-painted wooden table and Robsjohn-Gibbings chairs upholstered in cheetah-spot cotton. The Sam Francis painting joins a trio of bronze Jacques Darbaud.Striped in black and white, Pinto's bedroom has a Mimmo Paladino painting and a giant ammonia fossil; The bed linen of Frette. A work Marcos Coelho Benjamin appears above the bar; Porcelain figurines are antique. Bleached-mahogany cabinets line the designer dressing room, where a button-fluffy Italian chair is covered with faux crocodile. Hervé Van der Straeten sconces the Ralph Pucci International frame reflecting on the portrait of Marc Quinn in the master bath; Vanity was custom-made. Also in the master bath, a desk is overpowered by an Almir Reis photograph of volleyball at Ipanema Beach; The parchment lamps of the 1970s, and the chair philippe hurel in Profiles.The bleached wooden walls have a hallway and a guest room too. The door is located laterally with ebonized bookshelves, which wear Thai brass and tin-shaped candlesticks. Decorated with soft blue walls, this guest room is bold a baroque red varnish secretary and a Suzani blanket. The cool blue-beige guest room was buoyed by splashes of red, courtesy of duvets from the Savoie region of France; The '40s table has a Jean Royère gold-plated wooden mirror, and the Paul Dupré-Lafon lamps are covered with Hermès leather. Alexander Calder's work on iracsán is another guest room maguey-fiber wall hanging hand-woven Central American in the 70s; Designed by Pinto, the bed is upholstered with a mixture of leather and fabric.
