Daedra Heart is an ingredient in The Elder Scrolls V: Skyrim. It can be used to make potions in an alchemy laboratory as part of alchemy. Locals[edit | editing source] Some are found in missions to obtain daedric artifacts, while others can be found in random apothecary bags and in necromancers. They can also be obtained as a kill kill of Daedra. Recurring[edit | editing source] Shrine of Mehrunes Dagon, during and after Pieces of the Past. Four Dremora (two inside, two out), each has a Daedra heart. The four Dremora reappear every ten days in the game. Enthir, at Winterhold College, usually has two and replenishes every two days. O Jorrvaskr. In Kodlak's quarters, on or near a plate on the table. Counts as stolen unless the Companions' mission has been completed. A second Daedra heart can sometimes be stolen from Kodlak. Hearts can sometimes be stolen from Farkas, however it is extremely rare for him to be carrying any. Vigilante's Hall. On the table, at the end of the main room. Respawns at the beginning of each month, although it must be stolen. It is no longer available once the Dawnguard mission is started, as the hall will be destroyed. The Study of Valerica at Volkihar Castle.DG Babette, in the Sanctuary of the Black Brotherhood, usually has 1-2 Daedra hearts. Random and recurring[edit | edit source] Hunters can very rarely load one. Thalmor Mages rarely carry one. Alchemy stores can have up to two Daedra hearts in stock as early as the Level 2 character. You can also have one in your personal inventory, which can be stolen. The apothecary's in-game bags may contain one, though very rare. I found Dremora always dropping one. Any enemy spellcasters can drop one, but rarely. The more powerful the spellcaster, the greater the chance. Drelas's Cottage can sometimes be found in containers. One of them can be found in a dead alchemist on a random encounter. Stendarr vigilantes can drop one, although it is rare. Get out on hagravens, though rarely. A trip to Soul Cairn can yield many hearts, as almost all boobs contain one, and many of the enemies here have a chance to drop one. DG Only once[edit | source of edition] During the Nightmare mission awake, in the laboratory inside the Nightcaller Temple, there are four shelves in the right corner of the room with two hearts. During The Black Star, Maly n Varen summons three Dremora mages, each of which yields a heart over death. In the unmarked search for Daedric Relic, if Velehk Sain is killed, he will release a heart. Random: A wandering traveler named Balbus will say he is collecting supplies in hopes of sharing a new recipe with Gourmet. If the Black Brotherhood seeks to Kill an Empire Empire has been completed, the passage warrant can be shown to the traveler to receive a Daedra heart. If the search has not been completed, Daedra's heart can be obtained by stealing or killing the traveler. Narfi will give you two or three random ingredients as a reward after he receives Reyda's necklace on the Straw That Broke mission. A Daedra heart is one of the possibilities. There is also a chance that Reyda's remains contain a Deedra heart. After completing the Shalidor Maze and killing Dremora Valkynaz in Labyrinth. At the Sinderion Field Laboratory in Blackreach, on the shelf next to the alchemy table and charming table (it's the building right in front of the exit for Altand Cathedral). Folgunthur, during the Forbidden Legend search, can be found on The Corpse of Daynas Valen. The Ebony Warrior will have one after being defeated. DR Quests[edit | editing source] Coated in Blood[edit | editing source] Mariposa gro-Bagol, a blacksmith at Understone Keep, will ask the Dragonborn to locate a Daedra heart in exchange for a piece of light or heavy armor. The Cursed Tribe[edit | editing source] Atub, an orsimer mage in Largashbur, will ask for a Daedra heart along with a fat troll. Potions[edit | edit source] Main article: Potions (Skyrim) † Multiple Effects Crafting[edit | editing source] Daedra Hearts can be made in the Atronach Forge with the following ingredients: Sigil Stone 1 Human Heart 1 Black Soul Gem (filled or empty) The Sigil Stone is not consumed with the craft of the Heart of Daedra. Trivia[edit | editing source] Daedra Hearts are similar in appearance to Human Hearts, although there are more arteries in the Heart of Daedra, in addition to their deeper red color. In addition to their alchemical uses, they are also a key ingredient in the manufacture of Daedric armor and weapons, both in standard forges and in the Atronach Forge. These multiple uses, along with their rarity, make them extremely valuable items. Although Daedra's hearts are rare, almost all of her sources re-eat, which that getting enough Daedra hearts to create Daedric equipment can be difficult but but never be impossible. Some places where Dremora can be found and killed include: The Shrine of Mehrunes Dagon. During the Pieces of the Past search, four Dremora will appear around the shrine: two outside and two inside. After completing the search, the Dremora in and around the sanctuary will continue to spawn every few days. During the Search For The Black Star, there are three Dremora. One of them is found after completing the maze in Labyrinth. [edit] Notes[edit] The main difference between daedric equipment and ebony is that the essence of a Daedric creature is attached to the equipment. Hearts daedra provide this essence, and therefore are critical to make all varieties of Daedric equipment. Specifically: In forges, if the Daedric Smithing perk has been unlocked, a Daedra heart can be combined with ebony ingots and leather straps to make: All varieties of Daedric armor (armor, boots, gloves, helmet and shield). All varieties of daedric weapon (battle axe, bow, dagger, large sword, apple, sword, war axe and war hammer). In the Atronach Forge, if updated using the Sigil Stone, a Daedra heart can be combined with other items to make: All varieties of daedric armor. All varieties of Daedric weapon. A random enchanted daedric armor. A random enchanted daedric weapon. An unbound Dremora.
