Although this breed exists, many still have a love affair with natural leather straps, because they are a symbol of traditionalism and elegance. Leather watches match any kind of outfit, not a stainless steel band that tends to look better as an accessory for casual clothing. What's the difference between a genuine leather watch strap and a Faux Leather One? Natural leather watch bands have skins that have some stain spots, because it uses a natural material. Natural skin usually has a skin-like feel, and it stretches and wrinkles the way the skin. Faux leather tapes are usually PVC, and they tend to be very uniform and even touch. When pressed, it forms a depression similar to the type that it would observe when pressing plastic. What are the advantages of natural skin bands? While faux leather bands usually fare cheaper, natural leather bands offer advantages that faux leather can't. These include:Longevity - Natural skin usually lasts longer than faux skin, which over time decomposes, leaving nasty bruises on the belt. Appearance - Not only does natural skin last longer, they create a glossy, darker color coating over time (patina). It develops due to absorption of the skin's natural oils as well as elements.Comfort - The skin tends to be more flexible and therefore more breathable than faux skin, making it more comfortable to wear. This comfort also increases in longer periods of use. What Types of Designs or Leather Watches Have? While you can think of a simple watch bar when it comes to leather watch bands, there are actually several different models that you can choose from your group. These models include:Classic leather straps, which consist of simple pure leather without any other patterns on it,Contrast stitched straps, which are stitched line threads along the edges of the belt, usually color, which contrasts with the skin, rally straps, perforated leather straps from watch racing drivers wore in the past. The holes in the bands look edgy and also make the clock more breathable, bund straps that provide an extra layer of skin under the clock. It's an inspiration from the test watches and is a bit retro design. Padded straps containing extra padding to make them looser and firmer. Many luxury watches have padded straps to make them stand out. Nato leather and ZULU straps with the same design as nylon.
