On a sunny Saturday afternoon, the summer after graduation, I sat down for brunch with friends, nursing mimosa and a hangover. The night before, I had spoken, then danced and cared for a bearded man in a bar - a whiskey-soaked neck that left my chin red and raw. My phone can be heard as I choose an omelette, and when I read the text, I turn around. This is from the boy last night, I reported, throwing a cut to the left. My friends got in on the line, too. He wants to take you to dinner? - one of them makes fun of it. I know, I said. Why don't we meet at another dark bar at midnight? I liked him enough during the night of buzzing: He was confident and direct and the hair grabbing aggressively to the right degree. I felt quite desirable and a bit like prey in his hands. He was a little bad boy. It was hot, it was fun. Now he's acting like a good man. This softer side - the one that wanted to consult a bottle of wine and a divided dessert - threw me, a poet-phobia of post-city commitment, for a cycle. Which makes you shake your head (and maybe a fist), right? Here's a nice guy, maybe like you, to be cared for for lunch. In the meantime, you watch your girlfriends go out with assholes and see hot girls in clubs getting into booths with world-class ones. Yes, we are guilty of this behavior, and there is a suitcase full of evidence to prove it. Research has shown that men who rate highly in narcissism, psychopathy and Machiavellianism (traits kinetically called Dark Triad) don't get more tall. Conversely, a new study finds that too good is too early, not attractive for sexual choice. But the bad boy is a self-deed. The women he attracts (like the younger me) are not the type the smart guy wants to end up with. And fortunately for both sides, you can adopt his more charming strategies without becoming himself. Sweet and salty mix is a cog for today's cool women – and this is the woman you want. We love a charmer who is an expert in cooking chicken for dinner and undetectable bra at night. I wasn't ready for the new knight, much less childish and reluctant, so I didn't give him the props he deserved. Allow me and a few scientists to correct themselves to humanity (and good people) by explaining what we really want. The new cavalry gives little guidance on whether to open the door of its car. It's not about etiquette. It is based on respect and equality, not by the 1950s notions of protection and possession. I know, it doesn't help, when the check arrives. Amy Muzsis, Ph.D., a psychologist at the University of Toronto who studies sexuality and relationships (in this country of polite people), says the research confirms that modern life is quite confusing for men. For example, there are tons of confusion about expectations during the first dates. As a society, we have become more egalitarian and equal, but many people still adhere to gender norms on the first dates. But if a woman really likes you, a superficial detail – say, whether you help her or not on her coat – will not make or break the relationship. My sweet spot: when a man behaves gentlemanly, admitting that I do not require it. At the end of a recent meeting, a Hot Nice Guy definitely removed my insqueath wallet and said, If we split this, none of us would feel good. I wish I had the pleasure of taking you to dinner. You can take the tab some other time. Swoon. This sexy knighthood is so much more than money. It's a way of interacting with women, and involves targeting confidence without appearing arrogant. It is no surprise that self-confidence is sexy; take advantage of this fun study from the International Journal of Cosmetic Science. The researchers filmed 15-second clips of men after men used either body spray or one without scent, and then asked women to watch the videos and rate men for attractiveness. The ladies judged that better-looking men with deodorant, although apparently they could not smell them. Apparently, fragrant boys felt more confident, and their confident language made women's hearts flicker. You can stand up and approach women in a confident way without becoming an arrogant asshole. Talk a little bit and be yourself. Here's how my friend David, a 27-year-old business student, does it. I remind myself that there are many people who love me and like me, and that it won't be the end of the world if a woman rejects me. After you get shot down a few times, you realize it's not that bad, and then you conquer fear and you find yourself even more confident. Knight's level of confidence is accurate. He asks questions, listens to answers, and treats a woman like an intellectual plane. We're attracted to people who make us feel interesting and smart, Muiz says. This only gives you an advantage over the negro and invertebrate invertebrate, which can't hold the end of their conversation. One of the worst first dates I've ever dated was with a guy who's an hour late and then talked nonstop. You're smarter than that. But a new study also notes that a person who listens too carefully to a woman he has just met is likely to be viewed suspiciously. Study author Gurit E. Birnbaum, M.D., of the Interdisciplinary Israel, says a person o-so-understanding can be perceived as inappropriately nice and manipulative, or eager to pray, perhaps even desperate, and therefore less attractive sexually. - No, she's right. So endure a real conversation - calm back and forth - and you'll look curious, engaged and comfortable to give and receive. Sounds like a knighthood to me. A knight does his own, but allows a woman to fit into it; This translates to the quality I-bi-from-distance to Paris that women are irresistible. Mention your participation in the stage with the brave or indie art spaces – whatever it does to you. And respect her strange circles, too. If you're already connected, surprise her with a weekend getaway or show tickets. Women have a deep desire for literate, adventurous species. Christina Durante, a doctoral psychologist at the University of Texas at Austin, teaches how young women respond to reliable good guys against mysterious bad guys. In one study, women talked to a man followed by a twin brother (actually the same actor) at separate sessions. He followed a family scenario in one encounter and an exciting, bum scenario for the other. It was amazing to see the difference in women's behavior, Durante says. When a good father asked about the trip, we could hear a woman say, I was in Vegas with a friend. Consciously or not, she wanted to keep the possibility of a relationship open. We can't help but sway men who do manly, slightly dangerous things. I once got stuck with a professional skateboard and later confessed to a friend that I had looked at it on YouTube afterwards and admired how hot it looked on the go. Remember Greg? She replied. He was a dirty rocker. I did the same thing. And it's not our fault for biology. Masculinity is strongly linked to testosterone. Says David Lay, M.D., author of The Myth of Sexual Addition. Not to reduce the bad boy strategy of this one hormone, but we know that women find the body smell of men with high testosterone very attractive. Of course, you can increase your levels through bar battles (not knighthoods) or through exercise and competition in sports, politics, or business (hot). Men who want to have masculinity ozeo from their pores, so to speak, should try things like martial arts, competitive sports, or even high-adrenaline activities like skydiving, all of which boost confidence and testosterone levels. Leigh says. John Mayer smiled at me. Not really - a true story. Okay, we never chatted, but we were in a bar in Brooklyn, and he was at the other end and he shot me. And when TMZ reports that Mayer has a new play, my friends and I think, What kind of jerk does he really think he's going to be faithful? But that smile! I instantly as an honorable citizen and future friend. Female brains have developed this ad-i-i-mu-scotch, because Darwin-wise that is worth the risk of mating at a high level, although he can give up. We prefer strong children with an estranged partner over weak descendants with a blunt but devoted fool. When we observe the bad boy in his habitat, it is easy to see what attracts the female. Off the testosterone charts, social dominance, risk like – all show a healthy immune system. In evolutionary terms, savannah women desperately wanted to mate with healthy specimens because of the transmission of their genes, Durante said. The weaker person may not have been able to provide the resources as easy, so he had a lower value than a mate. The good guys died first. We've been scrolling for a few thousand years, and as much as we say we want a good person to stay, we can't help but feel a pull of our links to James Bonds (or John Myers) in the world. The tug grows stronger when our bodies call us to. It was well demonstrated that women are more attracted to bad guys when they are ovulating, says Christopher Ryan, PhD, co-author of Sex at Dawn, while they are more attracted to a cute, stable man when they are unlikely to get pregnant. In baby-making mode, we also grow more deluded. Durante's research shows that ovulation of women is more a like to believe that a sexy cad (her words) will become a good father — for them and themselves. They looked at the bad boy through pink glasses and thought: He might be for everyone else, but he'll engage with me, Durante said. We really have the ability to delude ourselves about how committed a person is if we find him exciting. Luckily, once John came out of the bar and Your body was a miracle stopped playing in my head, the magic broke. You have to trust us: We women are smart enough to overcome our primitive instincts when choosing boy/friends, even if good-looking bad guys temporarily interrupt our brains. And women looking for long-term, engaged relationships place greater importance on good traits, such as stability and reliability, than those women looking for short-term, casual relationships, Muiz says. Be Brad Pitt from Thelma and she'll come home with you; Be Brad Pitt the shepherd kids through the airport and she'll love you. If you're just interested in sex, fine, have fun. But when you're ready to find One, you know this: no normal woman wants to settle down with an asshole. Butts by definition make others unhappy, and research shows that we love partners who make us feel good. Assholes laugh at people's misfortune and expose their girlfriends to onerous waters. They also, judging by my personal experience, bad in bed because they are in their sexual maturity, who are thinking of handing over their head and asking: Say, how is this for you? A Penn State study found that arrogant men gave women less satisfying orgasms, and they didn't even ask me. We may think of Don Draper, but most women don't want to be Megan (or shuddering, Betty). The fictional character we want to catch is Coach Taylor of Friday Night Lights, often referred to as Good Guy. Here's the difference: Cool girls - the ones you'd like to call your girlfriend - won't hunt a guy who has nothing to offer, but this slippery bad boy charm. Remember those dark triad guys with a lot of chicks? Research by Peter Jonason, PhD, from the University of Western Sydney, shows that women with strategies to avoid affection (true, she wasn't loved enough as a child) are more similar to this type. If you leave your flag flannel, we'll hunt you ladies, but they'll probably be in need years of therapeutic camp. There's also a kind of woman who thinks she can handle a cocky man - a species that, Jonason says, believes in a toxic, narcissistic idea that he'll be good for her while treating others like garbage. Of course, you're setting yourself up for disaster, he said, because he's going to be a jerk to you eventually. If you go out like a dick, you're going to take women who are less mature because immature chicks see an appeal in unpredictability. . In one study, researchers at the University of Virginia asked college women to look at men's Facebook profiles. They told them one of three things: these men saw your profile and cared; these men saw your profile and were not very excited; or these men have seen your account and are marked whether they are interested or not, but we can not tell you what they say. The women in the study found that the obscure were the most attractive. They messed up the mystery of attraction. It's manipulative and it abuses me, and she's not in love with him. You said the woman wasn't for you. I sincerely hope that the person who seduced me in the bar cabin and then wanted to take me to dinner admitted that I wasn't cool enough for him at the time. We went out a few times (to go out to a bar, on my trip, although he always paid and brought me home) and then we separated. I moved on to a tattoo artist whose bed wasn't 22 years old, and luckily I've come a long way in the four years. And I'm sure a great woman more mature than me has snatched Bad boy. Because a guy with a mess in the bar and manners at the table? He's every hot woman's dream.
