Little tikes grillin grand kitchen instructions

When I first told my husband we had to get a toy kitchen for our son, he thought I was crazy. In his mind, the toys of the kitchen are made for girls, not boys. The selling point, however, was a barbecue! My husband is in charge of the barbecue in our house and because of the extra barbecue feature he couldn't wait to see our son flip burgers and hotdogs on his little barbecue. Outside the box The kitchen is pretty easy to assemble - to be honest it was much easier than I expected. Looking at all the parts and instructions I prepared for a long, painful assembly. Surprisingly, it wasn't that hard to put together. I did the assembly myself, and while I think it would be quicker if you had another set of hands for you to help, it can certainly be a one-man job if you don't have them. The instructions suggest that you have an electric drill at hand and I would recommend you do that too - some of the screws are quite long and could take you for a while (and put your hands to the test) if you would do them all manually. All in all, assembling the structure is pretty simple and it took me a little over an hour to complete. One thing to note - the labels are not on the kitchen outside the box, and you will have to put them on yourself - for the average person it should be an easy task, however for me it was a small challenge because I am a bit of a perfectionist and I tried very hard to make sure that each one was perfectly placed The first time my son saw the kitchen was so excited! He ran to him and started researching all sorts of parts. To this day we still spend most of our time playing in the kitchen - he loves that the stove and barbecue make fun of realistic sounds and I love what he learns while playing. Another neat feature on the kitchen is that the refrigerator has an ice dispenser. Personally, I love it and love the little ice cubes that come with the set (although I wish they were individual cubes rather than double) to make it easier to fall out of the dispenser. The set comes with 31 additions - from pans, dishes and utensils to corn on the cob, burgers and hot dogs with buns. My son is still. The youngsters and accessories include it seems to be enough to keep him occupied, however I would also recommend choosing a few extra food items to play with - perhaps backyard Barbeque Backyard Picnic or Backyard Barbeque Summer Fruit and Veggies. One of the things parents worry about with toy kitchens is storage for all accessories. Luckily grillin' grand has a ton of storage space from the cupboard and under the grill, to fridges, stoves and dishwashers - plus the set comes with two small storage baskets that fit perfectly into the storage cubes under the stove. This kitchen also has a multi-level counter top that has a passage to the other side of the kitchen allowing children to really pretend to serve each other a meal. The kitchen itself is large enough for more children to play at the same time - one can be cooked on the stove or in the microwave, and the other can use the grill. Grillin' Grand Kitchen is excellent value; At just $159.99 it is very comparable to the much more expensive kitchens on the market. It was a big hit in my house and I'm sure it'll be in yours.
