Students study the economies of developed and developing countries and how they are interconnected. They also learn to process simple data and conduct economic analysis, assess information and distinguish between facts and judgements about economic values. The curriculum, which is the basis for further study at Cambridge International AS and A Level, also encourages a better understanding of the world in which students live and helps them to take an active part in the decision-making process, whether consumers, producers or citizens of the local, national and international community.
