Water ninja pokemon

From Bulbapedia, a Pokémon encyclopedia driven by the community. Greninja (Japanese: abbreviated as Gekkouga) is a bi-type water/ Dark Pokémon introduced in Generation VI. It developed from frogadier starting at stage 36. It was Froakie's final form. With the Bon Battle Ability, Greninja can transform into a special form known as Ash-Greninja. Greninja with the Battle of Ability Bond should not breed. Greninja biology is pokémon like dogs, frogs. It is mostly dark blue with a yellow on the lower half of its face. He has red eyes with white disciples and his mouth is hidden behind a large pink tongue that wraps around his neck and extends out behind his head. Running into the middle of his head. There are large lumps such as white bubbles on each elbow and knee. His hind legs have two legs, while his front legs have three. Each digit has a menthol end and yellow webbing. Greninja moves with the speed and grace of ninjas. It uses rapid movement to mistake its enemies as it inhales them with weapons made of compressed water, most commonly in the form of distilling stars. These discarded stars are sharp enough to break metal. In the past, Water Shuriken and Mat Block were his signature steps. Through a transformation called the Bon Phenomenon, Greninja with the Battle Of Ability Bond in Generation VII can be transformed into an alternative form called Ash-Greninja. In this form, Greninja's skin exchanges a lighter blue color, while her face gets red lines and her cheeks and side fins turn black, changing shape to resemble Ash's hair. His legs are stronger in this form, and he has the ability to form a large Water Shurikens behind him. The Original Trivia Sprites of Greninja's overall appearance are based on frogs, and it may have been inspired by horned frogs of the genus Megophrys and Ceratophrys due to protrusions raised above his eyes. The color scheme and body shape are the same as fancy leaf frogs. Bubble-like protrusions on his body may be based on the parotoid glands of the toad, possibly referencing the traditional myth of toads causing the chairman, although they may also be the marginality of Froakie and frogadier frubbles. Like its species name, Greninja is also based on ninjas. Japanese culture associates frogs and toads with ninjas based on the folklore of Gallant Jiraiya (児 son of Jiraiya Gōketsu Monogatari) about ninjas who can form large toads. Greninja and its pre-evolution can also draw inspiration from thieves or the class of deniers as they often rely on speed and stealth and are often seen as agile or ranged fighters while tending to focus more on ignition attacks rather than withstanding damage. Ash-Greninja's original name is a combination of grenouille (French for frog) and ninja. Gekkouga is a combination of a koga-ryū and a kōga-ryū. It can also come from 月之 gekkō (moonlight), referring to the popular concept of ninjas walking all night or to Greninja's Dark typing, or the combination of the two. Categorized as a Pokémon Ninja, Greninja is a Water and Dark type Pokemon that is a master like a proper and stolen frog. He appeared in the XY anime Pokémon series as one of Ash Ketchum's main Pokemon, voiced by Yūji Ueda. This Greninja uses his bond with Ash to transform into a unique form, Ash-Greninja, which is then released into the game as a form that Greninja accessible to Pokemon Sun and Moon Special Demo Version players. Greninja was introduced as a playable warrior to the super smash bros franchise. with Super Smash Bros. for Nintendo 3DS and Wii U as one of the five representatives of the Pokemon series, and integrated into manga such as Pokémon Odyssey. Greninja has been met with very positive reception, quickly becoming one of the sixth generation's most popular Pokémon due to its design and strength that ends up in a competitive game. Its popularity has resulted in its integration into various pokémon franchise items and promotions. [1] Greninja's concepts and features are frog-like creatures packed with dark blue and yellow skin underground, with long, thin limbs, physical lying especially reminiscent of the principal frog. What resembles a pink scarf is actually his prahensil tongue wrapped around his head. Two long, ear-like protrusions are extended from both sides of the head and relate to a smaller horn-like structure in the middle by azure blue webbing. The same azure dye tompoks can be found on each thick thigh, arguably a ninja star or battle scar. Just like frogs, Greninja has webbed legs, wall-link cups on each digit, and strong hind legs. He shoots a stream of compressed ejaculation patterns from the footprints of his hands. Large bubbles are available on each member of the body. A bipedal creature, Greninja can stand comfortably on its hind legs, but leans on one of its front limbs in a refreshing stance when in battle. When at rest his eyes are white with the students in the shape of a sengkang, but when involved they get red, longitude shape irises, white disciples, and narrow gaze. He weighs just 88.2 lbs. (40 kg), but still somewhat high at 4' 11 (1.5 m). [2] He shares the game's class motifs with his colleagues of the Grass (Chesnaught) and Fire-type (Delphox) types; while the former resembles a knight and magic, Greninja draws inspiration from ninjas. In Japan, frogs and toads have long been associated with ninjutsu through the folklore of Gallant Jiraiya (児 son of Jiraiya Gōketsu Monogatari), the story of a ninja who can form a large toad. Greninja is capable of moves with the grace of ninjas, [3] and has the design and set of abilities associated with Ninjutsu. Among his attacks were the once exclusive Water Shuriken, which allowed him to quickly dispose of stars made from compressed water, [3] Shadow Sneak, and Double Team. [4] He is also the only Pokemon to learn Mat Block, which protects the user's side with a cut mat. Protean capabilities, which allow camouflage users to type attacks used, are exclusive to Greninja and a sworn Pokemon Kecleon (as well as former pre-evolution). Able to vanish and reappear quickly, it enjoys toying with enemies in any way. [3] He was very adaptable, learning many movements such as Bounce, Extrasensory, and Low Kick of various kinds. [4] Greninja's theft and concern are unique among the early water types, in difference with previous design such as Blastoise and Swampert. He shoots compressed water from their mouths. It was created by Yusuke Ohmura, who was a water-type beginner two generations earlier as well as mascot creatures for X and Y, Xerneas and Yveltal. [6] Greninja's design was finalized by Ken Sugimori, the art director of Game Freak. When Pokémon X and Y took place in Kalos, a french-inspired fiction region, the name Greninja combined the French word for frog (grenouille) and ninja. [7] It is used for english, Spanish, and Italian X and Y. Ironically, completely different names are used in French adjustments, with Amphinobi combining the Japanese word for croak (a.k.a. geko) and koga ninjutsu school (a.k.a. Koga ryū). [8] Appearances in the Video game Series pokémon game Greninja began in Pokémon X and Y, which was released internationally on October 12, 2013 for the Nintendo 3DS. As is true for most Pokemon evolving from scratch, Greninja rarely happens except rather than choosing Froakie at the beginning of the game and training completely. It can only be obtained instead by developing Frogadier Safari Partners, with the fully developed Froakie being named Froabble's competitor in the game is over, if Fennekin is the chosen starter, or through a trade with another player. It can be transferred to Omega Ruby and Alpha Sapphire via trade, or to sun and moon and Ultra Sun and Ultra Moon through Pokémon Bank's online storage system. Although very rare, Greninja has a shiny variant that can be obtained in games that jet black with tongue In X and Y, if a player chooses a Bomba-type Fennekin as their starter, the Serena/Calem rival will choose Froakie and eventually raise him to Greninja. If they choose the Chespin grass type, shauna's other competitors will do so. So. has been included in pokémon spin-off games as well. In the action game Pokémon Rumble World, Greninja is the back boss of Dewdrop Bay's Castle Moat, and can be recruited as a playable character. He is the fifth-ranked Region 03 boss in Pokémon Picross, Renegade Meadow in the Pokémon puzzle game Battle trozei, and the 24th Ranked Expert in Pokémon Super Mystery Dungeon, instead of being incorporated into the game box art. Another Nintendo game Outside of the Pokémon series, Greninja also appears in Nintendo's Super Smash Bros. Erecharacters Sifar Saman Bros. Ultimate in 2014, [9] back in Super Smash Bros. Ultimate in 2014, with the re-characters Sifar Saman Samus, Sheik, Yoshi, and pokémon charizard friends. The game's director, Masahiro Sakurai, stated that he decided to include the construction of the end, and he worked very closely with the Game Freak concept illustrations and made his own interpretation of the character. His features in pokémon games are mirrored in Smash, becoming an agile warrior with ninja-like stealth capable of attacking opponents with water from his palm. His last smesy, Secret Ninja Attack, incorporates Greninja's signature moving Mat Block. His home ranks include Prism Tower, kalos capital's Pokémon Gymnasium, on the 3DS version and the Kalos Pokémon League on the Wii U version. Through completing the Super Mario Maker challenge mode, the player can unlock mystery mushrooms for Greninja that can be used in customized levels of players. When Mario makes contact with the enemy, or loses his life. Greninja has the same sound bits as Mario, instead of pokémon games; this is also true for Pikachu, Charizard, Jigglypuff, Mewtwo and Lucario but not for Bulbasaur, Charmander or Squirtle. In the anime Multiple Greninja has made an appearance in the XY series anime Pokémon was first mentioned in the episode A Rush of Ninja Wisdom!, he made an official appearance in the 17th Pokémon films, Diancie and Cacoon of Destruction, under the owner of a thief ninja named Riot. Ippei and Sanpei, two recurring brothers in the anime, both have Greninja. They both chose Froakie as their starter in tribute to the Greninja people who saved their hometown. Ash Ketchum's Greninja series is the most prominent; she first appeared as Froakie temporarily attribate their awareness during the fighting. When such an exchange occurs, a former physical morf to resemble Abu, a form called Ash-Greninja back in the wild so that he could protect Kalos with Squishy and Z-2, which is two Zygarde, from the evil roots that Team Flare left after their defeat. In the live action film A Greninja group appears in the live-action film Pokémon Detective Pikachu, but as small antagonists working as hired weapons for Clifford Enterprises against Tim and Harry Goodman as Detectives Pikachu and Lucy Stevens so Psyduck Lucy managed to beat them by using the full force that has blown This up since the Greninja group had been the victim of illegal experiments by their mastermind Howard Clifford, but with the help of any of his evil scientists, perhaps like Dr. Laurent. [11] In a printed adaptation in the literary adaptation of the Pokémon Pokémon X and Y Adventures, Yvonne has a Greninja named Croaky. He chose him as his starter in Fast-Thinking Froakie of Professor Sycamore, his rival X picked Chespin, and Fennekin had poké Ball who was lashed out after an unintentional encounter with Xerneas and Yveltal. As Greninja, Croaky is shown as a very serious and efficient Pokémon, which is an accurate reflection of ninja-like discipline but differs from its implied nature in video games.
