ADA Access: N Reviewed 7/8/2018 This was our first trailer camping experience here, we always camped out in tents. Wild Plum is a family favorite for a number of reasons: large host camps, clean amenities, awesome hiking trails, breathtaking views, and well-placed sites. Most places are under the treetops, but there is a sheer light throughout the day. There are three loops that offer a combination of tent camping and camping with a trailer. We found a loop of 1-11 to be less private, the seats are a little closer, but you have excellent access to Haypress Creek, loop 12-19 has room a little more spread out, and you still have decent access to the creek - we camped out at 12, 13 and 19. Page 19 is best because it sets you apart from other campers, you are close to the toilet vault and drinking water, and your camp is right on the bank of the stream and offers you a breathtaking view of the creek, trees and Sutter Buttes. Page 16 also looks great and swirs. The third loop, 20-47 has mostly tent locations, but we saw some smaller trailers parked in the tent just seats along the creek bank. The road to the camp can be a little bumpy, and the roads inside the loops are narrow, it took a while and patience to get back to our place because of all the trees, but iteba paid off an itely. There's a big three-mile walking loop from the camp that takes you through the woods, past the falls and along part of the PCT - it's pretty easy, our kids are marching along with us, taking us around 1.5am. Sierra City has a small shop and several restaurants if necessary. This is a great camp, we'll definitely be back again. Campsites can accommodate tents, trailers and RVs. The two lower loops (1-19) have paved access and are much nicer for larger campers. The top loop is a dirt road and is the most compliant for camping in tents (although several locations would cartridge RV's). There is no #5. The camp has drinking water and toilets. Each campsite also has a table, a ring of fire/ barbeque and a food storage cabinet. Firewood is also available for sale from the camp's hosts.
