Sean Simon is a former keyboardist for the New Jersey band Pencey Prep, which he co-founded with Frank Hiero and John McGuire. After the band's breakup in 2002, he accompanied Gerard Mays' band, My Chemical Romance, on tour. It was while on tour that many of the ideas for the Killjoys comics took shape. In 2012, New York Comic Con announced that the first look at the series would be released in 2013 on Free Comic Book Day. The series is drawn by artist Becky Clunan and edited by Sierra Khan. Simon also worked outside of Wednesday's comics and was the winner of the Predators and Readers Editors poll for his flash fiction story The Snowman. The author lives in Montclair, New Jersey. Becky Clunan is a comic book artist, writer and creator. Clonan was educated at the New York School of Visual Arts. After graduating from university, she started working on channel zero: Jenny Odin. Clonan is known for her work on 9-11, MySpace Dark Horse Presents, Buffy the Vampire Slayer, and Conan the Barbarian.

Summary After the aftermath of the first battle, which was fought during Dangerous Days: The True Lives of the Fabulous Killjoys, the group's followers were kept in the desert, while Better Living Industries continued to undress the citizens of their individuality. Only the Girl, the only survivor of the original Killjoys, can help ignite a fight or join the masses in their meaninglessness. Gerard's development first announced the project, which will be written in collaboration with Sean Simon, in 2009 at San Diego Comic-Con, and in 2012 New York Comic Con announced that artist Becky Clunan would produce works of art. He noted that the comic book will serve as the final part of the story and that it will not be as insane as what people will expect. By the way, she also described the story as a funny story about a young girl and that she would choose her own path. On July 21, 2020, Way announced that the original comic book concept would be created in a new series called The True Lives of the Fabulous Killjoys: National Anthem. In Way's career as a comic book writer, it is the work of the successor to the Academy of Umbrellas. The comic continues the story described in the video clips from danger days: the true life of Fabulous Killjoys of the American rock band My Chemical Romance, and develops the plot of the third video clip, which the band programmed but never did. Starring a little girl in the video, simply called Girl, is now a teenage girl. The origins of the story by Gerard Wey and editor Scott Alley at Comic Con in San Diego in 2009, when they announced Killjoys. In 2009, Hood revealed that the story would revolve around a man who wants to restore his Ramones records and that, as an adult story, there would be a lot more adult and controversial topics such as hate crimes and homophobia. However, the plot has changed a bit since then, and in December 2012 Sean Simon commented: The way the comic begins is very different from how it started initially. [...] MCR made video clips and design work from the album Danger of The Days: The True Life of Fabulous Killjoys and that ended To the comic. We keep the same themes and many of the characters. All the sensations and atmosphere is there, but that's a different story now. Our original comic book influenced the album, and now the album is affecting the comics. The plot of the story consists of three parallel stories of characters living in completely different situations. One of the characters is in the desert, the other, he lives in a part of the city that, according to Simon, is really bad, and there is another character working for a corporation called Better Living Industries. The comic continues the story described in the Dangerous Days video clips, and takes place twelve years after Killjoys died at the hands of Corse and his henchmen. The main character is a little girl, simply called Girl, now a teenage girl, and includes characters such as Ultra-V, a group of young Killjoys fans, and two android prostitutes named Red and Blue, and antagonists such as draculoids and stuffed animals who were compared to Interpol agents. The comic captures the plot of the third video clip, which the band programmed but never did, and their drawings, made by cartoonist Becky Clunan, are influenced by the punk atmosphere that was in New York in the late 1990s. It was announced in 2012 that a preview of the comic book would be presented in May 2013 at a special Dark Horse Comics Free Comic Book Day event, while its first edition was released in June 2013. On May 7, 2014, a limited edition hardcover edition was released, which includes: six episodes of the series; a comic book called Dead Satellites, which was published as a prologue on the occasion of Comic Book Day 2013; By Becky Clunan, Gabriel Ba, Paul Pope, Gerard Gue, Fabio Moon, Rafael Grump and Brian Ewing. It is limited to 2,500 copies and priced at US$80. Chapters between June and December 2013, all six chapters were released: Whatever gets you through the Night Ghost Stations Blind or Teenage Lightning Run! Awakening Destroya Boom!
