Dave smith decoys snow goose

- Most of the lifetime and effective Canadian goose lure market in our view-DSD Company has a reputation for excellent customer service-All products made in the U.S. - very rare to find these days- New A.C.E. Model much more durable than original models of the same color detail--We found these decoys offer the best decoy results in any situation--We could get a smaller spread due to the added realism-about 2/3 spread size, the new durable body style makes it much easier to store and store for distribution in the new A.C.E. The technology of decoys to take care of the much lighter weight of the decoy-various body positions provides added efficiency--When the stakes are upright and straight, the spread moves very well with light winds-Steel stakes drive even the heaviest ground small sled I got a pair of original hardcore snows One snow and one blue in my office. I thought they looked like snow gees at the time, and I just wanted to look at them, too. If someone is going to hurt to have their DSD, then yes, your feet would be very important. But muddy outdoors, please take your feet off! If they were offered for about half the posted price, they might be something I would think about. I think blue looks nice, but I don't see the snow being any better. Originally posted by mo4NU View Post Came laughing about it! Fold Away Attached LEgs When hunting in short or muddy areas, the lack of feet of decoy is very noticeable in approaching geese. That's why we add ultra-realistic legs to the cast of real legs. The feet come with added, but flap away with convenient storage. This statement is very ridiculous. Hahahaha. At what altitude does he have a snow geep decoy????? OMG he needs to think and write something else. I can't believe I've killed so many snow geese when I have silos with socks that aren't legs!!! Hypothetically, if you knew that this decoy was magic dust, that improved the lures significantly (let's say, a similar e-caller in the first two years), but it took the numbers similar to what you now use; Would they be worth the money?? Their article said that someone came to them with 5,000 decoys. With $150,000... No, thank you. It was Alex Russo of Flatland Outfitters. When you check out your website, you can see that they are putting out first-class efforts. At least by the way things look. Their cottage on Sand Lake looks like a great trap. They want the decoys to match. It seems fearless to invest money in your business. If money wasn't an object I enjoy having nothing but a finest! I work what I got and once in a while I treat myself to something nice (in my understanding) and I don't feel too bad about it. That being said... I don't mind hunting for the medium equipment I have. Honestly, if I do my part and am in the right place, being very hidden in sharp-eyed adults, with the average gear I own (full bodies or socks) I think I have a 50/50 chance each day to get some birds. Is having a modest-sized spread of 10 dozen FB's to be DSD's instead of the average GHG/FA spread I have today to increase my odds significantly enough to justify the cost difference? It's hard for me to think this is going to happen. I'll probably never know. I don't feel comfortable spending that much on decoys, I would worry about the possibility of damage somehow in the field or in transport and I certainly don't want to get them dirty... This is America, if you have a coin and a desire to do it, I say do it. I'm not worried about that or let him keep me up at night when you get them, and I'm not going to. I'm going to look a little harder and hide a little better and be happy just to have out and have fun with my buddies. They are a great looking decoy and I'm sure of very good quality. If the money wasn't an item, I'd buy an instit! Qac having a few houses or an office would be cool, and cheaper than a good mount. I wonder when the first decoy is simulated breathing and heartbeat... be sure approaching snow you can choose a lack of respiratory function right just before dealing with the circuit breaker with no feet. Last edited by mo4NU: 07-08-2019, 04:19 PM. It's about trade. Just maybe running a smaller spread of high quality FBs also works with a much larger spread of lower quality FBs or some 1000 socks? Have a link to funding your website Ha-ha! Late in the season I've had some decent hunts over 20-40 ghg in one piece and Avian X fullbodies I don't think they would be a game changer really, but can help truly finishing the birds and getting them to the ground with decoys. If my party work money stays strong all summer I might have to try about 40 just to see. The biggest downside for me apart from the price is when I pay that much for them I probably bag them and I hate dealing with slotted bags. Right now I just throw birds x trailer pile it would be hard to do to them if the color is really solid. I must admit, I broke down and ordered six dozen. I just need to see them in my hand. And I'm literally hoping it doesn't motivate me to switch spreads next spring. I don't think they're likely to be the difference.comers. But then again, there's an idea that just maybe they'll help out another 3-5%. Besides, I can be influenced by what I like, and not just what birds like. Funny, but one thought I had how hard it would be to have any spread stolen, but these: which would be devastating! Insurance must probably fall asleep at night. Has anyone ever secured the spread of theft while in the field? I don't think the landlord's going to cover it. Last edited by Geez n Quackers; 07-11-2019, 11:52 AM. Btw five, informative When I spoke to the company, they said the lure is bigger than GHG in one piece. They said they are about the same size and weight as avian x snow goose. Looks like the look speaks for itself. I said (I believe his name was Brad) I would look for a very durable color that does not pass from light to dark and dark light to decoys. I should probably spread to sleep. I'd be messed up. I woke up in the middle of the night thinking my SS was spreading when my SS was drowned in floodwaters. It was about to go pull it out at 2am because I couldn't get back to sleep. Originally posted by Geez n Quackers View Post I have to admit I broke up and pre-ordered 6 dozen. I checked the site and they say they sell 10 packages. Did you order the blues???? Then I check out the bulk discounts and they talk about boxes of decoys not a dozen as they do in Canada and spec decoys. When you finally get them to James if you can post some pictures of them. I would like to see some off camera pictures not advertising ones. Using these smaller spread sizes could be a ticket for certain scenarios, but snow geese love large crowds for the most part. They're glad to have it in hand to really see how they are. FINISH MORE GEESE & HAVE FUN! Order now learn to further we are prototypical and develop our new Snow Goose decoy line over two years. We combined realism and usability to create the most snow goose decoy on the market. Our brand new, large motion cone design built with a limiter makes it easy and faster than ever to set great spreads. When hunting in short or muddy areas, the lack of feet of lure is very noticeable in approaching geese. That's why we add ultra-realistic legs to the cast of real legs. The feet come with added, but flap away with convenient storage. Snow geese don't want to. one decoy at a time. We knew with this decoy that we had to add sturdy tail loops, that you didn't have to. If you put up hundreds of bets at once, your hand will feel it. We were careful to design a pile that has a large top surface and smooth edges, but still offers movement even with light breezes. Gone are the days of losing the stakes in the field. Our new lightweight fiberglass piles come with reflective tape and highly visible red tops that light up like a beacon when the device spreads in the dark. The difference in DSD is attention to detail. If the contestants use one white color or not at all, we chose a different path. Almost all snow goose decoys on the market are cool or blue on the side of the color scale. Snow geese are actually on the warm side and have a more yellow tone. It was very important for us to nail and we used our house color spectrometer to do just that. We are confident that this alone will help stop more snow geese from killing the hole.
