What started as a line of available and high-quality aloe vera products eventually expanded to our current varied skin and body products, but we never abandoned our commitment to creating effective, nature-inspired formulations. On earth's fruit, we care as much about where our ingredients come from as we do about where they are going. That is why the aloe used in our products is carefully grown and harvested, as well as ethically sourced from a fair-trade manufacturer. We also formulate all our products internally to ensure that only the best goes into everything we make. We have always been based in Texas, and every step of the manufacturing process, from first concept to distribution, happens here in the Lone Star state. We are proud of our Texas roots, and of being American team and family owned. Passion for the company and its mission is one of our family traditions, and it carries through in everything we do.
