Today also marks 5 weeks since I turned 27 years old. On my birthday, I wrote several things that I want to accomplish before my next birthday. Since then I've been a bit of alignment and what I want to work towards. I took small steps here and there, however they are not significant enough to create the changes that I want to work towards. I wrote this down in hand and didn't start totaling my time by categories until recently. When I did... I was angry at myself for wasting time on unprecedented activity. I know I give myself, especially when I study or reading I go to youtube or read the news and all that was going on. By the time I realized it I wasted several hours!! I'm not saying there's anything wrong with doing that, but I can't waste my time on activities that don't benefit me in any kind of way. I did some research and found the app toggl. I didn't get it then. oh my boy wish I had. A couple of days ago I actually downloaded it and I've been using it since then. Seriously this is just what I needed! I know for sure I will make tons of use to see exactly how I spend my time and budget it right away. One of the things I'm actually happy I've done more is reading. But unlike the last one where I've read passive, I've taken notes. Most importantly, I took action. I'm now on to finish the Self-Disciplinary Book at day 10 and this book was a great help. He mentioned the importance of self-speaking, assertion, and also power tools to help with discipline. I've read a couple of books about discipline in the past, but this one really gets to the root of the subconscious idea. She explains it in a way that gets me actually doing the exercises provided and I become more aware of my thoughts. Another thing I'm glad they did is remit. The first time I heard the benefits of rebonding while listening to the audiobook will never be fat again. I didn't get it then. I finally purchased the refund in February and I wish I'd had gotten it sooner. Rebonding helps your lymphatic system, boosting your cell and immunity, plus it's a fun exercise. At the moment I can't do much, but this is a kick on the bottle. At first I could only do 30 seconds, but now I can make a minute without having to take a break. Today I did 13 minutes, 13 sets every 1 minute. At the end, I signed up for an online course at Quickbooks, I was procrastinating. This week I've actually made an effort to take it seriously and take notes instead of just reading the material. I planned to start looking for a job in accounting/accounting since my savings went down more than I thought they would. I had multiple car problems from getting a new tire, alignment, battery, alternator, and head cutting insurance I was due. At the time I was put that on hold due to this pandemic I want to make sure I don't just take anything because I feel desperate. I'm grateful that I have health, shelter, food, my family well, and access to the internet. If anything this is the time where I'll make sure you reflect and make the most out of my time. Anyway, there are 266 days left in 2020 and there are 330 days until my next birthday. I know both seem like a while ago, but at the end of the year I want to be at my goal weight and by my birthday the best of financially. There are other things as well, I want to be able to proudly say I accomplished what I wanted. Unlike previous years, when the day was marked only by Kindergartners, this year's 100th day of the school celebration extended throughout the Lower School and began in the 100 years ago, dressed like 100 years in the future, dressed as being 100 years old, and putting the number 100. In class, they created 100th Day of School Hat, they listed the 100 favorite words, and ate at least 100 snacks. Still the popular Zero Hero made an appearance to mark the milestone, with seniors and Kindergarten Buddies decorated T-shirts with 100 hashmarks. Was February coming and going... 100 days passed ... and not nearly a lot of people stay in the school year! To download a full-size image, hover over the picture and right click.
