Tanaka persona 3 fes

P3 P3 Manga P4 P4 Anime P5 Patrick Seitz (P4D, P4Anime) President Tanaka is president of the mega-corp company. Appearances[edit | edit source] Design[edit | edit source] His appearance is middle-aged man with dark gray hair and gray eyes. He wears a gray suit and a faded dark red tie. Two years later in Persona 4, he wears a dark gray blue suit and yellow tie. In Persona 4 Animation, she has brown hair and dark brown eyes. He wears a dark navy suit with a red and yellow tie. In Persona 5, she wears a black suit and a red and white tie along with a set of dark shades on her eyes. Profile[edit | edit source] He is known to be a successful and cunning entrepreneur. Tanaka also hosts its own home shopping show Tanaka's Amazing Commodities, which shows every Sunday morning. He is also known as TV Tanaka. Persona 3[edit | edit source] If the protagonist's charm is high enough, he asks him to be a model for his products. He then cheats the protagonist out of a large sum of money. However, when he sees that the protagonist does not know that they are being exploited, Tanaka takes them under his wing and begins to teach him about business. The protagonist would then create the Devil Arcana Social Link. Tanaka, with a passion for making money and a lack of business ethics, teaches the protagonist dubious sales tactics. It is suggested that Tanaka materialism may stem from his childhood, coming from a poor family and being constantly looked at by his peers. Tanaka later takes an interest in a colleague who likes to do charity work. He punishes her, but eventually realizes that what she really loves is not making money, but educating others so they can be successful. At the end of the social connection, Tanaka makes a great donation to the orphanage. He gives the protagonist a Thank-you Letter from the orphanage, lending the Ultimate Form to Beelzebub. In an extended re-release of Persona 3 FES, Tanaka is chased by dozens of interviewers lambasting him for his unethical business techniques, challenging him for explanations. Tanaka then tricks interviewers, using the interview to advertise their products. Tanaka also mentions that he has nothing to hide or be ashamed of, suggesting that he has turned to socially responsible business methods. As mentioned above, the protagonist can also tune in to Tanaka's Amazing Commodities on TV on Sunday morning, where Tanaka advertises his products. Persona 4[edit | edit source] Tanaka returns as a supporting character in Persona 4, however, he is not represented by any social link. He returns as host of Tanaka's Amazing Commodities, where the protagonist can buy his products every Sunday morning. When the fog begins to thicke towards the end of the game Tanaka uses the fog to scare to his advantage and sells only gas masks until a certain story related event is completed. Animation[edit | edit source] In anime 18. Persona 4: Dancing All Night[edit | edit source] Tanaka appears in previews of the game where it mentions the DLC and Persona 5 extended preview disc that comes with the game. Tanaka is in charge of selling costumes, accessories and songs. Persona 5[edit | edit source] Tanaka now runs online shopping, allowing the Protagonist to purchase their products by ordering online. They need to buy a broken laptop at a store outside Café Leblanc in Yongen-Jaya and a PC toolkit at machine part shop in Akihabara. The store is accessible once the broken laptop is repaired in the protagonist's room. When repairing the laptop will consume a period of time, the protagonist can freely access the store afterwards, without the time to pass. Product lists may vary depending on the date and order of customers. The protagonist rank advances on black after spending a total of 10,000 yen through purchases this way, then dark after 50,000 yen, and maxes out on Chaos after 100,000 yen. Available items range from powerful accessories, clothing whose identity can only be revealed after washing in the laundry room, and transmmunable breakdown equipment. Purchases take several days to arrive at Leblanc, and no new orders can be placed until the previous ones arrive. The man says he would slit his mom's throat for a five-piece, which is most likely a reference to popular quotes from Final Fantasy VI, when Edgar talks about shadow character on the second first appearance and says: He would slit his mom's throat for a nickel! In P3 FES, starting tanaka social link to 1/21 will allow the player to completely skip the final battle and lead directly to the real end. It requires LV. 4 Charm and 10000 yen to initiate this social bond. Tanaka is the only optional social link that will automatically rank up just by talking to it. It is available on Tuesday and Saturday nights at Pallownia Mall.Rank 1-10: AutomaticFor the completion of this social connection you are able to fuse Beelzebub through Hexagon fusion using Baal Zebul, Abaddon, Lilith, Pazuzu, Succubus and Incubus.
