I think i started using this term in my daily life. I knew it had reached the end of the tunnel and started to see the light, until the end of the difficult journey. I recently looked up the words that cannot be sunk and defined this world English dictionary: cannot sink: can not sink or sink. This word seemed like a perfect metaphor (and not sinking) when we went through difficult times and survived and did our best to get through it. We are trying to stay afloat. This book came because of the trials and tribulations of my life. There was a time when I felt i was drowning, and when I tried hard to swim against the current, I felt i couldn't do it anymore. At other times, we will simply float and surrender to the present. One trip was difficult and tiring. The other was peaceful and calm. Over time, I have been blessed to meet amazing people who have experienced seemingly incomparable life difficulties, but i have become happier than ever without getting hurt. I had to study them. I had to learn from them. What was the secret to peace and happiness in spite of despair? How do you bounce back quickly when life takes you down? I will share their dramatic and inspiring stories and the lessons I have learned from them. I've also interviewed many famous self-help writers and experts through a series of teleseminars i've hosted. I was amazed that each of them had their own way of sharing and teaching messages, but found a common theme between them. Some of them also donated the words of unbearable wisdom to this book. This book is not something you have read and cast aside. It is a book you will see over and over again. It is a journey. It is a book that you incorporate into your daily life from this day forward. You see, it's about going through this difficult situation or time; It is about soaring through all the situations that throw your way, not only in the future. The tools, tips, stories and steps in this book will change your experience with life itself. You can't control your situation at the moment, but what you can control is the reaction to them and the way you choose to experience them. This book will guide you to the ultimate state of mind where life can be brought to you and you can be happy. Of course, you still have those moments of anger, frustration, and sadness, but they will be short-lived. You experience those feelings and move forward with peace and strength. As you know, this book doesn't pop up quickly when life takes you down. It's about bounces higher than you ever thought possible. It's about achieving greatness despite what happened in your life, because it happened in your life. I have experienced disappointments and tremendous changes in my life over the years, and I will not share this book and this important message with you today if that negative experience has not happened to me. See? Everything has a reason. About we stood in the driveway between our two parked cars ready to say our last goodbyes, and I was an empty shell, paralyzed inside. Some of me were still eager lying about the past, while others were reluctantly being pushed into the unknown. Our two cars were packed in boxes, and the last one remained at home. The moving truck has already taken all the big things. Our big beautiful house was empty now. At that moment, my heart was empty. It was time to say goodbye. That's it. The end of my life was well known. Of course with all the ends, there is a new beginning. I didn't know what this new beginning would be. I knew what the end looked like, and the burning pain in my heart to say goodbye to being unbearable. The pain of this tremendous loss felt as if I had been repeatedly stabbed in my heart. I was saying goodbye to this man I loved with all my heart. He was my soul mate, my best friend, and my biggest supporter in my life and career. I was saying goodbye to amazing stage kids who knew that after this day I could see from time to time. I called home and said goodbye to one of the houses. And I said goodbye to life so perfect at one time. Yes, it's perfect. At one time, it was all perfect. Remembering the previous year of that moment was quite a roller coaster ride. In fact, it was the most difficult and challenging year of my life. Looking back on all the events that happened, I realized that I could probably write several books in my story: dealing with serious health problems (blood clots); dealing with financial ruin and losing everything (including my house); Living with an alcohol partner (can be a series of books alone); One dealing with relationship breakups; And the last one on the restart. My experience left me raw, exposed and vulnerable, but the lessons I learned and the growth I experienced helped me reinvent myself and reach the top of the proverbial mountain. Looking back on what had happened now, I realized that everything had happened as expected. Today, after the storm and the sun shining again (brighter than ever!), I realized that it was something I had to do to blossom into the person I am today. I appreciate everything. It was a gift. I can't believe this is all happening to me. One thing I know for sure: something good will come out. I don't know what to do yet, but something amazing, huge, and amazing, will come out of it. Something too big; I'm going through all this with nothing, so i check it out! That's what I said to myself when I hit the rock floor. I remember exactly where I was (in my bedroom) and where I was standing (from the window looking outside). I just had a big meltdown. My face was still streaked with woven tears. My eyes swollen with blood and crying. I felt defeated, lost, and helpless. I didn't know which direction to go back, what to do, and how to get out of the situation. But I had faith. I believed. I have no idea where this power came from. In fact, not long ago, I wanted to finish everything. The pain was unbearable. My heart seemed to be torn. I just wanted to stop the pain. Why is this happening before the moment? For what?! For what?! It was the only word I could call in the sorrow of despair. The pain i felt in me was unbearable. I had never felt such deep pain. I don't know, my life partner whispered quietly in my ear. I do not know. He caught me close while we were lying together on the bed with a spoon. I crouched like a ball like a little kid. We were quietly lying there for what seemed like eternity. I was at the end of the rope. I just can't do it anymore. Life continued because it was so hard and painful. Everything in my life seemed to slip. I felt like I was drowning. The idea of ending everything seemed like the only way to end this pain. I thought for a moment. Then, I started to flow bigger and louder than before. I realized that getting everything done was not even an option. If I do, the people of my life who love me will be devastated, and the thought of all the suffering caused by my death will make me more depressed and desperate. I knew that my mother and father would never recover from such a tragedy. Their only daughter) and my best friend, my brother, will never be the same again. The thoughts that brought deep sorrow and pain into their lives (like the pain I felt at that moment) were something I didn't want to do. I will continue to flow uncontrollably. What's surprising is that after a while, I was in the spotlight of being a best-selling author #1 of my first book. I was busy with TV interviews, radio interviews, book signings, and speaking events. My business has transformed into something absolutely amazing, offering out loud, inspiration, hope, help to people around the world. I was healthy and fit as a violin. I found the love of my life (finally!) and was an instant step mom to his amazing two children. I was on top of the world! Everything was the perfect picture. When life takes an unexpected turn, how does one go from living a happy, successful life full of love, harmony, and abundance to thinking that ending everything can be the only real option? I wondered how all this happened in the first place. I wondered how all this would be brought into my life. For those who don't know me, I wrote a bestseller titled 'The Ordinary and Simple Laws of Attractions'. In this book, I explained the 11-step process of how to express the life of a dream. In fact, the book was hailed as taking blockbuster hits and DVD The Secret to the next level. In this book, I explain what the law of attraction is and how to master intentional manifests to achieve everything you want in life. If you are not familiar with the concept of the law of attraction, I explain in the book in this way: The law of attraction is a universal law that always exists. In a nutshell, it means attracting the same. According to the attraction's law, energy and expected energy attract similar energy. In short, whatever we give conscious attention to, we are attracted to our lives. Knowing how the law of attraction works, I wondered how this confusion would be brought into my life. How did I go from the wonderful lysiseness of my dream life to actually losing everything? At first, I was scratching my head wondering where I was wrong. The truth is, I did not do wrong; Everything happened exactly as expected. You know, one of my goals was to change the world. I wanted to deliver inspirational messages to thousands of people at one time at large venues around the world. Every day, I visualized thousands and tens of thousands of stories on stage.
