Cops and robbers games 2 player games

Playing games by yourself is great, but sometimes adding a social element to the mix can bring a dose of fun to the experience. Whether you and your friends are working together to devise evil enemies or fight to see who reigns supreme, multiplayer games can be a blast. The only problem? It's not always easy to find games that support multiple players in any meaningful way. Below, we'll look at some of the very best PlayStation 3 games that let up to four players participate simultaneously. The one thing they have in common is that playing with friends adds a lot to the experience. Then call up a group of friends and delve into these amazing games. Source: Insomniac Games Ratchet and Clank: All 4 A For most of its history, the Ratchet and Clank series has been primarily a solo affair. The games are about a furry Lombax and his robot sidekick traveling the universe and using cartoonish weapons to bring evil empires to their knees. With All 4 One, up to four players can work together to do exactly the same thing. While you'll spend much of the game blasting through swarms of deadly aliens with your friends, it's the interactive puzzles that add a touch of new ideas to the action. That's because all four players have to work together and do their part to solve them. The result is a top-notch multiplayer game that is tons of fun for any group of players you can assemble together. Source: Activision Guitar Hero 5 So many music games came out in the 2000s that Guitar Hero 5 couldn't help but feel a little outdated when it launched in 2009. But it was then, and it is now. Since we've had half a decade to clean our palates, what was old feels brand new again. In short, it's great to rock out with your friends. Just put a microphone or plastic instrument in front of people and let the fun begin. This installment is particularly suitable for groups of varying experience, thanks to its Party Play mode. Party Play simply starts a stream of songs and lets everyone participate in any instrument they want to play. No one can fail, and the songs continue, whether four people play or zero. Music games have always been great for multiplayer, but thanks to the new mode, Guitar Hero 5 is ultimate party game. Source: 2K Games Borderlands: The Pre-Sequel Are you ready to go back to Pandora? This series of first-person shooters offers some of the most satisfying gameplay around, with great, beautiful views to explore and tons of nasty enemies to pump full of lead. One of the keys to the show's popularity is that treasure chests are scattered everywhere, and they're full of sweet, sweet booties. The game has hundreds of gun types, all with randomized stats, so it quickly becomes your mission to find and equip the best possible gear. When you play with a Friends, you will have to grab as much loot as you can, can, it's first come, first served. Sure, can you give your friend the high-powered rifle you just found, but what will he give you in exchange? There is no better way to experience this game than with a party of four. Source: Blizzard Diablo III: Ultimate Evil Edition This insanely addictive hack-and-slash dungeon crawler lets you play with up to three friends, either online or on your couch. Although it's fun to play on your own, ravaging through dungeons with four people is definitely the way to go if you can. There's nothing that solidifies friendships like the mass slaughter of an entire demon army. Even better when playing with others the tricky level ramps up, making the match much more strategic and entertaining. But like Borderlands, you'll want to make sure you get to loot drops before your friends do. A game this demonic can't be all about friendship and altruism, right? Source: Activision Marvel Ultimate Alliance 2 If you and your friends would rather crawl through a superhero universe, you'd like to download Marvel Ultimate Alliance 2. This game has you and your friends controlling the likes of Wolverine, Spider-Man, Deadpool, Captain America, and others as you use your unique powers to plow through an army of robots and super villains. And although the game came out before The Avengers took over the cinematic landscape, it tells the story of Marvel's Civil War, a tale the films are currently ready to tell. Which means now is a good time to play this superpowered four-player game. Source: Ubisoft Rayman Legends No one wants to keep things serious all the time. And if you want to add some comedic recklessness to your life, Rayman Legends have you covered. Like the best Pixar movies, this side-scroller is filled with personality. From the hand-painted backgrounds to the lovingly exaggerated animations, Rayman and his friends are practically guaranteed to put a smile on your face. The goal is always to make your way from point A to point B, but what you find in between is quite bizarre and charming -- whether it's a tickle monster, a giant luchador, or the song Eye of the Tiger, played on a kazoo. If it doesn't light up your day, nothing will. Up to four players can jump around the screen at once, creating some of the most off-the-wall hilarity found in any game out there. Multiplayer fans should not sleep on this one. Follow Chris on Twitter @CheatSheetChris Check Out the Tech Cheat Sheet on Facebook! If you are a franchisee with advice and tips for sharing, email ktaylor@entrepreneur.com When Brad Smith started looking into buying a Merry Maids his best friend who was already a franchisee tried to deter him. Why? His friend was worried Smith would have a hard time switching to life as a cleaning franchisee in Georgia after his intense work as a police officer in Bosnia. Smith quickly proved his friend wrong, and was even nominated Merry Maids Rookie of the Year his first year in business. Here's what he's learned over the last 10 years. Name: Brad Smith Franchise owned: Merry Maids in Conyers, Ga. How long have you owned the franchise? In August 2014 we celebrated 10 years. We started from scratch and now have more than 300 customers and between 20 and 25 employees. We operate four franchise territories in six counties with two offices (and growing). Why franchising? My dream has always been to have my own business. For years I downloaded a copy of Entrepreneur magazine to learn about available opportunities and businesses. Even when I was on active duty as a police officer, I knew I would own my own business. Franchising provided the perfect setting. Related: Franchise Players: How being forced to fire myself led to my career in Franchising What did you do before you became a franchise owner? My background is in law enforcement (teaching and public speaking), where I have served in a metro-Atlanta police force for more than 30 years. In 1998, I launched a one-year peacekeeping mission in Bosnia that turned out five years. My job was to work with other international police to help protect civilian human rights and ensure compliance with the peace agreement. We worked in the civilian sector so that the military could do military tasks. While there, you really saw the need to help, so I volunteered to teach children three evenings a week and every Saturday. The whole mission stretched me; it was challenging and humiliating to work in a beautiful Eastern European country that suffered so much from war. I credit some of my success with Merry Maids to my time in Bosnia because you see what others are going through and you know you can't keep up. I have a special place in my heart for the Bosnian people. So when a Bosnian immigrant named Zina applied in 2005, I was thrilled to have her. She's a tough cookie who's been put on a bus like a teenager with her little brother and told to get out of the country during the war and verbally sparring with snipers on a roof top She didn't back down. Her leadership, communication and computer skills were so good that over time she became our first office manager and is still with us today. I even had the opportunity to visit her Bosnian town and see the school she attended - talk about an extra background check. I attended the ceremony when she became an American citizen and saw how proud she was to become an American and work hard. Why did you choose this particular franchise? I knew Merry Maids Well. My best friend had a very very Merry Maids franchise in Virginia, so I was familiar with the brand. As a police officer I had seen the name as I travelled around the area and it had a really positive connotation for me. Funny, but my friend tried to talk me out of it because he didn't think I could make the transition from policing, especially coming back after working so intensely in Bosnia. He was worried but supportive. I knew I wanted to be affiliated with a company that educated its people well, had the honor and reputation I felt Merry Maids had, and were supportive. When I visited Merry Maids headquarters in Memphis to learn more about the company, I said that's what I want to do and the people I want to work with. The best choice I've made. Within 90 days of opening the franchise we were riding like a wild horse. In the first year we were nominated for Rookie of the Year. My critic friend was quiet then but happy for us. How much would you estimate that you spent before you were officially open for business? The franchise fee was about $37,000. Adding in equipment and expanded marketing, it was about $55,000. It was my choice to invest more in equipment and staff to grow. We expect to have over a million in revenue in 2014, a rapid 10 year growth. Where do you have most of your advice/do most of your research? I researched different business models and opportunities, but having a friend who already owned a Merry Maids franchise in Virginia helped me get an insider's view of Merry Maids. The name recognition was strong with me and his success was amazing to see. An example of the name recognition came before we officially opened for business. The moment our phone was connected, it rang and a woman on the other end said, "Finally, you're open." I'm watching a Merry Maids here and today I went online and your number popped up. True story. It was a woman who used Merry Maids in Dallas for years but couldn't find a franchise after moving to Atlanta. She remained a regular weekly customer for years until she moved. Related: Franchise Players: Why I became a franchisee at 40 What were the most unexpected challenges in opening your franchise? The challenge for me was actually rapid growth. The purchase was extremely reasonable and the name pretty much ran business. In the beginning I did everything from administration to discretion to actual cleaning. Some of my first and most unexpected struggles were to stay ahead of the curve with growth. I found I couldn't think about today, but I needed to think about what I needed for next month, next year. Fast growth is a wild horse and a challenge, but definitely a nice challenge to have. What advice do you have for people who want to own their own franchise? First, you need to know what you want. Set your write them down, look at them, and keep them. When I was a cop. Policeman. I talked to schoolchildren about the goal. A visual technique is to find an inspiring photo and tape it to your mirror so you see it every morning. So get up and go, dream that goal and make your dreams come true. The main driver of choosing a franchise is there is a proven path to success. Someone has already established a system that can help you, and you can build on that success by asking questions and learning from challenges and results. Franchising also lets you apply your own positive skills to add to success, and you've built in consultants there to help. Associate with other franchisees or entrepreneurs who are successful and be open to change in and around you. Help others and always be teachable. I have found some of the most successful people are the ones who help and are willing to learn from others. What's next for you and your business? For the past two years, we have focused on the growth and development of our team members and customer base. In 2012, we expanded and in 2013 we expanded our business area to four franchise areas. We have people calling us from the other side of Atlanta - 50 miles away - and for now, they're inaccessible. But it sure is a nice compliment, they want to have Merry Maids. Successful growth is only part of my story. I firmly believe in giving back in my own society and on the other side of the world. I'm still active with the sheriff's department reserve unit here in the metro-Atlanta area as a deputy, where I volunteer with many community organizations such as Georgia Special Olympics and other programs - people helping people. Through Merry Maids, we support women's shelters, local food banks and other dignified community groups where we try to help those in need. In June, the floods in Bosnia devastated entire cities, which was particularly tragic when they came on their heels of war so quickly. We worked with Bosnian Community Center, The World Catholic Church and Yonkafa Project (support). We collected supplies at Merry Maid's office but had to move to the community center to accommodate the medicine and hygiene donations that flowed in. We were able to send a 40-foot container with more than 20,000 pounds of relief. Being able to give back like that is what it's all about for me. As a team, we recognize our customers are real people and not just accounts. We work to provide the best professional service and support through volunteering to help real people with real needs, locally and globally.
